SMALLWOOD LEAVES FOR OTTAWA TALKS

A member of the Newfoundland conference delegation said Smallwood, who had been making abbreviated appearances at sessions during the first two days of the conference, had meetings scheduled in the capital today.

It was understood he was discussing the Newfoundland shipbuilding industry with officials in Ottawa.

Partial Success Seen for Talks

By BRUCE YEMEN

The constitutional conference was heading toward a likely mid-afternoon closing today with the possibility of partial success in an amending formula for the constitution.

There was a reasonably good chance that all provinces would support adoption of the formula which would require the consent of seven of the 11 governments for constitutional changes.

But there was apparently no guarantee that all provinces would agree to submit the formula to their legislatures for ratification at the earliest possible opportunity.

Quebec May Seek Delay

Quebec may reserve the right to delay such necessary approval until it is satisfied in the field of income security policy where it seeks primacy over federal powers.

The social policy question would almost certainly be discussed at another constitutional conference well before all legislatures would have a chance to approve the formula.

This scope for delay could give Quebec Premier Bourassa the leverage he needs to continue his fight for provincial control of social policy while partially satisfying the conference's hopes of being able to present a concrete example of progress to the public.

The formula was agreed to in a tentative way as "feasible" by all provinces at the February constitutional conference in Ottawa.

It would give the federal government a veto on constitutional changes along with any province having more than 25 per cent of the Canadian population — that is, Ontario and Quebec.

Also required would be the approval of at least two western provinces having at least half the western population, and of two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Davis Makes Pitch

Bourassa has maintained that simply approving a formula by which to change the constitution isn't enough. The conference has agreed with him in the past in the sense that it would like to approve a number of funadmental changes along with the formula.

Ontario Premier William Davis made a strong pitch Tuesday for Quebecs social policy demands to be deferred to the next conference when they could be considered in the context of the entire tax system and distribution of powers.

However, there appeared to be a fundamental difference of opinion on the basic question of whether social programs should make income security payments directly available to people, perhaps through a form of guaranteed income or negative income tax, or whether the monies should be dispensed by way of provincial treasuries.

There was no indication whether Bourassa would give up his insistence on tying his approval for a constitutional amending formula to his social policy demands.

But Davis' approach appeared to offer some possibility for Quebec to get support from its powerful neighbor province in its fight for more provincial control of income security programs.

Going 'Very Well'

The Ontario move came during a long afternoon session of the conference which ended only after the premiers and prime minister had spent almost two hours together without their advisers.

There were indications the session was a "hot and heavy" one. It ended with Prime Minister Trudeau literally sprinting past and through a pack of reporters and Bourassa escaping by a side door.

Trudeau was quoted as saying the discussions went "very well — great."

An aide to Turdeau said there was "nothing to say" about the Ontario proposal and there was no indication that Ottawa favored putting the social policy question into the tax reform field.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's tax reform budget is scheduled to be unveiled in Ottawa Friday.

The social policy issued was expected to be discussed further today as the conference moved toward an end this afternoon.

Davis' proposal, made public during the session, expressed concern about the Quebec proposal to have income security policy "com-

Russians Ready to Make 'Concrete' Berlin Offer

BERLIN (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, said today that the Big Four talks on West Berlin have advanced to the "stage of examining concrete proposals on the content of a possible agreement."

Brezhnev told the East German Communist party congress in East Berlin that he can't speak for the United States, Britain and France, "but we, on our side, are prepared to make efforts to bring this matter to a successful completion and to ensure that the agreement reached be effective and carried into life."

Brezhnev gave no hint of concessions to the Western demands for an end to Communist harassment of West Berlin and of traffic between the city and West Germany.

But he called for ratification of the treaties West Germany concluded in the last year with the Soviet Union and Poland, saying this "will largely contribute to a renovation of the political climate in Europe."

Chancellor Willy Brandt has pledged not to submit the treaties for ratification until a satisfactory Berlin agreement is reached. West German officials reported last week that the Big Four ambassadors to Germany had reached general agreement on a liberalization of surface traffic between West Germany and West Berlin, but they said much remained to be done before an over-all agreement could be written.

Brezhnev voiced only token criticism of the United States, saying that the capitalist world was losing ground, and "in such a situation, some of the bosses of the imperialist world are becoming incapable of a sober appraisal of the situation and are undertaking military adventures, resorting to aggression."

"Evidence of that are the aggressive wars of the imperialists against the peoples of Indochina and the Arab countries."

More Communities Hit by Hydro Strike

Fewer men but more localities were involved in today's strikes by electrical workers against B.C. Hydro.

Less than 300 men were out at a wide range of communities, including Duncan, Ladysmith, Salt Spring Island and the Vancouver Island Terminal at Duncan.

Other areas involved include Langley, Haney, North Vancouver, Sapperton, Hope, Lillooet, Seaton, Cache Creek, Kelly Lake, Burns Lake, Houston, Valemont, McBride and 100 Mile House.

Negotiating committees of Local 258, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and B.C. Hydro met Tuesday.

Local president Tom Forkin of Vancouver said later the meeting was a "general exploration" and that wages are "by no means the only thing in this picture."

Other major issues include job security because of contracting out of work and isolation pay.

"No other meetings have been arranged at this point," said Forkin, who reiterated the local's position in favor of an outside mediator or board to assist in settling the dispute.

Mexico Mayor Quits In Goon Squad Probe

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — The mayor and police chief of this city have resigned in the wake of charges that they sponsor the "Falcon" goon squads that shot and killed 11 student demonstrators last Thursday.

Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez, who denied involvement immediately after the clash, today would not answer questions as to why police did not intervene when the Falcons attacked the students.

Price Increases To Slow: Benson

OTTAWA (CP)—The economic outlook is optimistic generally for higher employment and slower price increases, though many uncertainties remain, the government said today in its pre-budget white paper.

The 237-page volume of statistics and reports on past and prospective economic affairs was tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. It is a preface to the budget speech he will deliver Friday, charting tax policy and producing a revised Income Tax Act.

The transition from an economic slump to a period of recovery "took effect during the second half of 1970," the white paper said.

"Looking ahead, it is expected that the pace of advance will gather momentum as the recovery becomes more broadly established."

By the end of the year, said the report on economic prospects for 1971, personal spending should pick up and business investment might be expected to contribute more to the expansion. The recovery started last year with higher government spending and strong export sales.

DEFICIT $418 MILLION

The white paper reported the government had a deficit of $418 million in its budgetary accounts for the fiscal year that ended last March 31, compared with a surplus of $393 million the previous year.

Such a shift from a surplus to a deficit in the federal government's balance between revenues and expenditures has a powerful pump-priming effect on a sluggish economy.

The $418 million deficit was added to the country's net debt, which on March 31 this year stood at a record $71,360.9 million. This amounted to $892.22 per person in Canada, up from $794.56 per capita a year earlier.

The federal government had $12,769 million in revenues last fiscal year, compared with $12,323.9 million in 1969-70. Expenditures in 1970-71 were $13,186.6 million, compared with $11,931.3 million in 1969-70.

Mr. Benson will give his forecast of revenues and expenditures for the 1971-72 fiscal year that began last April 1 when he delivers his new budget Friday.

PRIORITY PROBLEM

The economic review said unemployment has been "on a basically declining trend following the September, 1970 peak." But it still remains at a high level "and consequently continued to be, and is still, the prority problem of economic policy."

Price increases, the report added, showed a more moderate trend during the first three months of 1971 "apart from a rebound in food prices."

The rise in incomes has been outpacing improvements in productivity, "but to a somewhat lesser extent than a year ago."

People have more savings and are showing more willingness to spend on goods they could defer buying. Manufacturers have a backlog of unfilled orders, interest rates are lower, and credit is more easily available.

Taken together, these and other developments in the economy indicate "a significant growth in new employment opportunities and a likely downward trend in unemployment through the remainder of the year (1971)," the white paper said.

UNCERTAINTIES EXIST

"The rate at which prices are rising may well continue to be moderate, although many uncertainties exist about cost changes in relation to productivity, and about price developments among our trading partners."

Canadian exports boomed in 1970 while imports rose only slightly. Freeing the Canadian dollar from international exchange controls meant Canadian goods and services were cheaper for foreign buyers, while imports became more

Pentagon Expose Halted

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The New York Times today in an editorial assailed U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell for "an unprecedented example of censorship" after Mitchell and the justice department he heads won a temporary injunction stopping publication of the secret Pentagon Vietnam war study.

The Times today complied with the court order.

But its lawyer, Professor Alexander Bickel, called the government's action a "classic case of censorship" forbidden by the first amendment's guarantee of a free press and free speech.

"A newspaper exists to publish; not to submit its publishing schedule to the U.S. government," he said.

The Times said it would "fight what we believe to be an unconstitutional prior restraint imposed by the attorney-general."

COURT ORDER

Under the court order issued Tuesday by Federal Judge Murray Gurfein, The Times is forbidden to publish any further material from the secret documents detailing U.S. involvement in Vietnam at least until the judge rules on the government's request for a permanent injunction.

Benson's Advice: Borrow More, Spend More

OTTAWA (CP) — The government expects consumer spending to be a big prod for economic growth in the balance of 1971.

Where will the money come from?

The budget papers tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Edgar Benson seem to hint that people should loosen their own purse strings—and perhaps borrow more in order to spend more.

The white paper's economic forecast noted that in the last two years, there has been an above-average rate of personal saving. Consumer debt relative to incomes has tapered off.

In other words, according to the white paper, more people have more money in the bank than they did. And they could borrow more against their higher incomes.

"Increased liquidity coupled with lower interest rates and greater availability of credit should generate substantial outlays for new homes, furnishings, appliances and automobiles," the report said.

It added that there have been signs already that people have been spending more on the kind of purchases they deferred during the period of high inflation and uncertainty about the future.

The government's figures show that in the first three months of 1971, personal income after taxes was running at an annual rate of $2,602 per capita, or $10,408 for a family of four. Personal expenditures were running at $2,358 per capita or $9,432 for a family of four.

Two years earlier, per capita after-tax income was $2,334 or $9,336 for a family of four, and personal expenditures amounted to $2,151 per capita or $8,644 for four.

The white paper said the use of consumer credit last year increased much less rapidly than in most recent years—by only five per cent, compared with 13 per cent in 1969 and 14 per cent in 1968.

Shadow Mischief

Jurors Join Acquitted Man For Post Trial Celebration

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Gagnon and Jacques Larue-Langlois were cleared of seditious conspiracy charges Tuesday following a six-week trial that ended in cheers and an impromptu celebration with some of the jurors on a sunny terrace.

The courtroom audience noisily applauded the 12-man jury when the verdict was returned after more than three days of deliberation.

Gagnon, a former university lecturer, and Larue-Langlois, a former CBC radio producer, were arrested shortly after the War Measures Act was invoked last Oct. 16. They were accused of having conspired between January, 1969, and November, 1970, to overthrow the Quebec government by force.

Gagnon remainer behind bars. He was granted $850 bail later Tuesday pending his trial on membership in the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec and is expected to make a second application for bail today during his appeal of a three-month contempt of court sentence imposed May 3.

CELEBRATES IN SUN

But Larue-Langlois, already on bail awaiting trial on another charge, went off to celebrate in the sunshine of Old Montreal around the corner from Place Jacques Cartier. He was accompanied by his lawyers Bernard Mergler and Robert Lemieux, labor leader Michel Chartrand and four of the jurors.

Three more jurors soon arrived one by one to the cheers of the celebrants and the crowd gathering at an open-air bar by the cobblestone plaza.

"I think you have just said a definite 'no' to repression," he said.

Mr. Lemieux also thanked the jury and described the verdict as "a victory for freedom of expression."

STILL FACE CHARGES

Both Gagnon and Larue-Langlois still face charges of membership in the FLQ.

During the seditious conspiracy trial which opened May 4, the Crown produced 31 documents said to have been written by one or another of the accused.

In his summation last week, prosecutor Jacques Clement quoted from the documents such passages as "Liberty is found at the end of a rifle" and "We must build a revolutionary movement, a people's army."

Gagnon, who conducted his own defence, contended there was no evidence of seditious conspiracy, and noted that two of the three accused had been in prison during the period of time specified in the indictment.

"I cannot yet believe the seriousness of this affair," gagnon said. "I could never believe that three men, two of whom were in prison, could overthrow the government by force."

FIVE WERE CHARGED

Seditious conspiracy charges were brought originally against five men—Gagnon, Larue-Langlois, Vallieres, Lemieux and Chartrand—last fall.

But the original charges were quashed in February by Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet on grounds that they covered too long a period of time, were faulty in their wording and lacked sufficient detail.

Redrafted seditious conspiracy charges were laid later against three of the five.

Lemieux and Chartrand are also awaiting trials at the September assizes on FLQ membership charges. Both are free on bail.

partmentalized" in a consitutional agreement at this time.

Ontario feels that income security and redistribution should be an integral part of taxation policy, Davis said. It should be discussed as part of a much wider field, he said.

If Quebec accepted Davis' view, it could conceivably drop its insistence on social policy concessions as a condition of its approval of a constitution amending formula.

But Bourassa, fearing to return home with no concrete gains from the conference, might simply accept Ontario's approach and reluctantly decline to give final approval to the amending formula at this time.

Or he could kill the formula, reject Ontario's viewpoint and go home to say he had stood up for Quebec autonomy.

The conference earlier Tuesday was reported to have approved the wording of the formula which would allow Canadians to amend their own constitution without recourse to the British Parliament.

But approval of the wording and adoption of the formula were two separate matters because of the Quebec insistence on a package deal.

Davis' proposal was reported to have found favor with Premier Bennett of B.C., who has opposed any package deals on the amending formula.

The Ontario view is that "tax credits" could be used to guarantee minimum family incomes. This resembles Bennett's plan for a "negative income tax" as the main instrument of income security.

Ontario expressed agreement with Quebec, not to mention B.C. and Manitoba, that a more integrated approach to income security programs is needed.

Decentralization Need

It also put forward the view that more decentralization of the Canadian federation is needed and that Ottawa could retain adequate control of national fiscal policy with a reduced share of the tax base.

"Through a much greater integration of income security policy with the tax system, Ontario believes that much of the constitutional problem relative to income security can be avoided," Davis said.

"Basic income guarantees can be built into the Canada-wide income tax system. Provinces could then supplement this or develop programs suited to their own needs and priorities . . ."

Davis noted that Ontario hasn't in the past pushed for decentralization in the income security field but added: "We recognize the emphasis and concern of the government of Quebec in this field."

"We believe it should be made possible for provinces to devise their own integrated income security program which will permit considerable variation in benefit levels and priorities of programs among the provinces, all to be built on a minimum country-wide base."

Concern Not Shared

Davis said Ontario recognizes but does not fully share the federal government's concern that provincial primacy in income security fields would dangerously erode the fiscal power of the federal government.

He said Ontario sees "a number of problems" related to the Quebec argument for "fiscal equivalence," the compensation Quebec would seek from Ottawa to operate an income security program.

Bourassa told a press conference prior to the afternoon session that Quebec wants legislative primacy in a number of income security fields but family allowances would be the main area which would in practice be affected.

He defined primacy as a situation in which the provincial plan would take precedence over a federal plan if the two conflicted.

He said Quebec's proposal isn't intended to give that province any special privilege. It is simply intended to give the province the power to control and develop an integrated income security program — a power that all provinces should have, he said.

Bourassa said he would have to wait and see what would result from discussions of the question of compensation for such provincial programs.

He declined to reveal the nature of a federal "counter-proposal" on the social policy question, saying it might be changed during the afternoon session.

He denied that Quebec was using "blackmail" in its effort to get social policy concessions in exchange for approval of the amending formula.

He said it was too early to see what the Quebec delegation would do if it failed to win its case, but he referred to the possibility that if it didn't get the desired results now, it might "later."

field promised that the secret Vietnam report will be disclosed publicly through congressional hearings, even if newspaper publication of the document is blocked permanently by the courts.

In granting the restraining order effective only to 1 p.m. EDT Saturday, Judge Gurfein did not rule on the merits of the case, but said the temporary harm done to The Times by his order "is far outweighed by the irreparable harm that could be done to the interests of the United States if additional articles in the series were published while the case was before the court."

But The Times said it felt that "once this material fell into our hands, it was not only in the interests of the American people to publish it but, even more emphatically, it would have been an abnegation of responsibility and a renunciation of our obligations under the First Amendment (of the U.S. constitution guaranteeing free speech) not to have published it."

"Obviously, The Times would not have made this decision if there had been any reason to believe that publication would have endangered the life of a single American soldier or in any way threatened the security of our country or the peace of the world," the editorial added.

While ordering the series suspended, Judge Gurfein refused a government request that The Times be required to surrender the Pentagon documents.

SAY IT'S A FIRST

Lawyers for The Times argued that the government's move appeared to be the first time in U.S. history that a newspaper was being restrained by a court from publishing an article.

In seeking the restraining order, the justice department maintained that publication of further articles on the documents would cause "irreparable injury to the defence interests of the United States" and would cause "serious injuries . . . in our foreign relations . . ."

It also contended that publication of the material, classified as "top secret-sensistive," violated a federal anti-espionage statute.

The Times said: "We . . . felt it incumbent to take on ourselves the responsibility for their publication, and in doing so raise once again the questions of the government's propensity for over-classification and misclassification of documents that by any reasonable scale of values have long since belonged in the public domain."

expensive and the economic slump dampened import buying.

"It would be unrealistic to expect a repetition of last year's record increases in exports, especially to overseas countries," the white paper said.

Exports to the United States could benefit from revival of economic activity there, and more imports may be drawn into Canada by growing investment in machinery and equipment.

"On balance, the foreign sector is not likely to provide further stimulus to the current expansion."

Government spending at all levels—federal, provincial and municipal—is expected to be buoyant throughout the year. But private business spending, curbed by reduced profits, has been running at a low rate.

Canada's gross national product in the first three months of 1971—the total value of all goods and services produced—was running at an annual rate of $87,888 million. Setting inflated prices aside, this represented a real increase of only 2.5 per cent compared with a six-percent annual rate of growth recorded in the last three months of 1970.

SECRECY ANGERS EXCLUDED YUKON

A Yukon Territory councillor complained Tuesday that half the land mass of Canada is unrepresented in the secret session of the constitutional conference.

"It's bloody ridiculous," said Norman S. Chamberlist, an elected councillor from the Yukon who is an observer at the conference.

As an observer, he is not allowed into the secret sessions.

"They talk about this as a meeting of all the governments of Canada, but what about the Yukon, what about the Northwest Territory?" he asked as he paced angrily in front of the closed chamber door Tuesday.

He said Ottawa doesn't seems to understand that the territories are trying to "throw off the apron strings" of the Canadian government just as Canada is attempting to do with the British Government.

Chamberlist said he doubted if any of the premiers had spoken up for the constitutional needs of the territories.

He said he has so far been told nothing of what went on in the secret sessions of the conference.

Bennett Hosts Dinner Cruise

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Admiral of the fleet W. A. C. Bennett took most of Canada's first ministers and about 300 guests on a relaxing three-hour dinner cruise Tuesday evening after a heavy day of constitutional talks.

Good spirits — though not the LCB kind — seemed to prevail, and after a dinner of Sooke Crab, Cariboo beef and Saanich strawberries, everyone visited the bridge of the Queen of Esquimalt, the pride of B.C.'s ferry fleet, which returned to the Inner Harbor at 10:15 p.m.

Two premiers passed up the invitation. Joey Smallwood of Newfoundland was on his way to Ottawa, and Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec, with whom Bennett has had obvious difference this week, was also missing.

Chatting on the bridge, Bennett said Bourassa had begged off with a heavy schedule of work.

Many wives of premiers and guests made the trip, including Margaret Trudeau, who wore a pant suit of saffron silk, blue sandals and yellow daisies in her hair. A spare daisy was pinned to the Prime Minister's lapel.

WELCOMES GUESTS

Because of a late afternoon session of the constitutional conference, Queen of Esquimalt did not leave until after 7 p.m.

Premier Bennett, who left the conference earlier than the other premiers, stood at the foot of the gangplank to welcome guests.

He was asked why he made an early exit and replied he had to prepare for the cruise, billed on the invitations as being sponsored by the B.C. government and the B.C. Centennial '71 Committee.

The ferry sailed around Oak Bay and Ten Mile Point to about Gordon Head before turning out towards the San Juan Islands and then back to the Inner Harbor.

Premiers and other high-level guests were served in the ship's upper deck dining room, and the rest ate in the cafeteria and tables set up in a lounge.

True to form, the government produced a "dry" reception, though one of the state rooms on the upper deck was set up with a full range of soft drinks, mixes, ice and sliced fruit.

UNUSUAL GIFT

In private, the Trudeaus were presented with an unusual gift from the B.C. government.

The gift was an enlarged copy of their marriage certificate (they were married in B.C.), specially "gussied up" for the occasion, according to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, who had been carrying it around all afternoon in a brightly colored wrapping depicting a large peacock.

Up on the bridge, Trudeau took the wheel and asked Bennett to join him, suggesting they steer in opposite directions.

B.C. Judge Demand Prevents Agreement

British Columbia insistence on guarantees of appointment of a B.C. Judge to the Supreme Court of Canada was reported Tuesday to have prevented final agreement on entrenchment of the court in a reformed Canadian constitution.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said B.C. made a strong case at the constitutional conference for the next appointment to the court to be from B.C. but he declined to confirm that constitutional guarantees were also sought.

Entrenchment of the court in the constitution — removing it from the whim and fancy of the federal Parliament — has basically been accepted by the conference.

Justice Minister John Turner confirmed after Tuesday morning's session that the question of appointment of judges to the court had occupied the conference for some time.

Conference sources said Bennett put up a stronger than expected fight for the guaranteed B.C. representation.

Peterson said B.C. hasn't had a member of the court since the early 1960s.

Under the proposal being considered at the conference there would be no regional basis for appointing the nine judges, but three of them would have to be skilled in the Quebec civil law, meaning in effect they would come from Quebec.

Also reported dropped from the list of conference aims was hoped-for agreement on entrenchment of official French-English language rights in all provincial legislatures.

Alberta and B.C. were reported to have put up bitter fights against this proposal as an invasion of provincial jurisdiction.

TIMES WROTE SERIES IN GUARDED SUITE

BOSTON (UPI) — The New York Times' reports on a Pentagon study of the Vietnam war were written in a guarded Manhattan hotel suite under secrecy so strict many of the newspaper's senior editors did not know of the series until it appeared in print, the Boston Herald Traveler said today.

The copyright story in the today's Herald said the writing of the report was called project X by the Times.

It was completed, the Herald said, "under conditions of secrecy so stringent that many senior editors in New York and Washington had no idea of the massive Vietnam report until they read the first installment in their newspaper."

The study started about three months ago when reporter Neil Sheehan was pulled from the Times' Washington bureau. Since then, he and a handful of other reporters, editors and copy editors were locked into the suite poring over the 45 volumes of the U.S. defence department study, the Herald said.

The report did not say where the study was obtained.

It was examined under conditions of security perhaps similar to the ones in effect when it was originally compiled. Special identification was required for anyone trying to enter the suite and the ID cards were updated and changed regularly, the Herald said.

Only the top men at the Times knew of the report, including Vice-President James Reston, Managing Editor A. M. Rosenthall and reporters Max Frankel, Hedrick Smith, E. W. Kenworthy and Fox Butterfield, the report said. Washington bureau members were given no indication what project was keeping Sheehan busy or when he would return.

FBI SNIFFS FOR REPORT SOURCE

WASHINGTON (WP) — There are 15 "legitimate" copies of the controversial Pentagon report on Vietnam, the administration disclosed Tuesday, and a massive hunt is on to identify the one to which the New York Times was given access.

Sources at the justice department said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation was ordered Monday to call on all persons who have legitimate copies. It is assumed that these calls were made Tuesday.

According to administration sources, the copies are distributed as follows: six in the Pentagon, one in the White House, one each in the state department files of Nicholas B. Katzenbach, former under secretary, and William Bundy, former assistant secretary for Asia and the Far East, one in the LBJ Library in Austin, Tex., two in the National Archives, two with the Rand Corp. and one with former defense secretary Clark M. Clifford.

Pentagon Best-Seller

THE NEW YORK TIMES' REvelation of Pentagon secrets in regard to a crucial period of the Vietnam war is a blockbuster which will have reverberations well into next year's presidential election. Although court action has temporarily halted further publication of details of the 47-volume top-secret study which was written on the orders of Defence Secretary McNamara in 1967, enough has been disclosed in the first three instalments to add a devastating blow to governmental credibility in the unpopular conflict.

The deceptive statements and moves of the Johnson administration, at a time when the fundamental question of whether or not the United States should go fully into the war was being determined, are now revealed. If anything were needed to add to the disillusion of those Americans — particularly the youth — who oppose the war, this must be it.

The picture exposed is that of a nation being pushed inexorably into a major conflict on the Asian mainland, with neither the public nor Congress aware of what was happening. The result was that the provision of American advisers for the South Vietnamese forces turned into a flood of combat troops; the standing policy of providing only defensive forces for United States installations moved quietly into a campaign of offensive actions.

The change was kept from the public at home as long as possible; orders were to play down any reference to such fighting. The legislature of the United States itself was unaware of the change in policy. And it is only now clear that the decision to escalate the war was taken by President Johnson months before the incident in the Gulf of Tonkin, in August, 1964, when two United States warships were reported to have been fired on by Communist gunboats, to provide the legal peg on which the president's escalation order was ostensibly hung.

Canada comes into the picture with the revelation that the Canadian member of the neutral International Control Commission acted as a messenger boy for Washington, to deliver threats of aerial bombing to Hanoi. Ottawa's initial response has been to say that this was known and it was felt that anything that might contribute to ending the war was to be encouraged. But Canada does not emerge from this episode with any kudos or any indication of independence.

The action of the New York Times may be criticized on the grounds of national security; what has been made public can only lower the country's prestige in other national capitals and raise the hopes of North Vietnam for a favorable turn of events. But on the other hand, the deceptive behavior of the administration toward Congress and the nation must be impossible to condone. The authorities appear to have lost their right to protective secrecy in the face of the people's right to know what vital decisions were being taken as to their country's future and the lives of a generation.

Low Cost Drug Substitutes

AN OLD ISSUE HAS SURFACED once more in Toronto where a committee has recommended to the provincial government that pharmacists be allowed to substitute lower-priced but equally effective drugs for those prescribed by doctors. The proposal would, however, permit doctors to disallow substitutions by pharmacists.

The object clearly is to make the cost of necessary drugs as low as possible. That aim has been advanced in different guises. Years ago, for instance, the City of Victoria attempted to establish a list of comparable drugs. The list would have been used to provide drugs for welfare recipients at less than top prices. The attempt at that time failed.

The proposal submitted in Toronto would allow physicians the right to prevent substitutions. Physicians disallowing substitutions could be in any of at least three categories: those who were convinced of the virtue of a special drug over all others, those who had failed to acquaint themselves with the equivalent virtues of a less expensive substitute, or those who had a special interest in fostering the sale of a particular product.

Under these circumstances, would it not be preferable to put the issue squarely up to the doctors and their disciplinary authority to see that the most favorable treatment was given to their patients, and that no favoritism was shown for unjustified reasons to a particular producer at the patient's expense?

Avoid Pollution Havens

NATIONAL STANDARDS, THE touchstone of practical patriotism, have application also in fields other than income security. Public concern over fouling of the environment has brought the problem of controlling pollution into prominence. The new Environment Minister, Mr. Jack Davis, is moving ahead vigorously with a program of regulations designed to keep the environment clean and beneficial to human welfare.

Mr. Davis announced in Ottawa that some provinces, which remain unidentified, are resisting his efforts to introduce standards for pulp and paper mill effluent. He is hopeful that a majority of provinces will soon endorse the anti-pollution provisions of this particular measure and that rules can be published within the next two months.

Pulp and paper mill effluent is only one part of the comprehensive anti-pollution code Mr. Davis and his assistants have been working on for a considerable time: other enterprises like the chemical, petroleum and food processing industries are to be brought within the scope of the ambitious federal scheme.

There should be no hesitation on matters of principle in the establishment of overall standards, nor should there be continued wrangling by any provinces on specific regulations to effect these standards. No province can afford to become a pollution haven.

Implications of the Treaty

IT IS PERHAPS COLD COMFORT to the West that the recently signed treaty of friendship between Moscow and Cairo does not provide for direct and immediate Russian assistance in the event of a renewal of hostilities between Egypt and Israel. Article 7 calls on Egypt and the Soviet Union to engage in no more than mutual political consultation in case of an international crisis. There is relief in Washington that the treaty does not call for the Russians to send in manpower.

Co-ordination in planning is an obvious result, though, and according to a New York Times Moscow correspondent "the implication was left that the Russians might join in the fighting."

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

A Party Hand in the Taxpayers' Pocket

EVERY right-thinking Canadian, presumably, favors the limitation and control of election expenses. This was the subject of a report, in October 1966, by the Barbeau committee and it is now the theme of a special House committee which has submitted recommendations for consideration "at the earliest possible date." Elections, on the testimony of Sir John A. Macdonald, are not won with prayers. It has been widely understood that he had in mind other aids, notably money.

Western

As a general rule votes are not purchased nowadays in the free and easy fashion of pioneer times. With campaign costs soaring, however — especially since the advent of television — political war chests have retained their importance.

There is, accordingly, an uneasy feeling that money plays too great a role for the health of democracy. The candidate of independent means has an obvious advantage. Political parties, drawing their funds from business firms, contractors or unions, may be suspected of undue tenderness towards benefactors whose interests can be advanced or retarded by public policy. Despite existing restraints, a good deal of spending can be camouflaged by ingenious managers, which does not lessen its significance for the outcome of elections.

Accountability

Part of the solution, in the view of the committee, is to make the parties much more accountable. They would become, if the proposals are adopted, legal entities, with the doctrine of agency fully applicable as between the official agent and candidate and as between official party agents and the party.

In the course of its ponderings, however, the committee has been attracted to certain other ideas which may, or may not, appeal to the general taxpayer. As not uncommonly happens, it has occurred to the members that the taxpayer is the answer to an otherwise intractable problem.

Parties, it is generally agreed, are indispensable in the operations of our democratic system. This, of course, has been true since confederation. Only now, however, has the realization dawned that subsidized parties are indispensable if our institutions are to survive.

The case to be presented to the less-than-enthusiastic taxpayer, presumably, is that by lending his involuntary financial support to the parties, he will save them and himself from the grip of the interests.

First impressions, however, are sometimes deceptive. In the present instance the committee has not recommended that the interests can be cast into outer darkness. It has merely decided that they need the company of the taxpayer.

Tax Deductible

In future, if the report is implemented, individuals and corporations will be entitled to claim as tax deductible expenses contributions to candidates or registered parties, subject to prescribed limits on an annual basis or separately for election and byelection periods. There is to be no limitation to the amount of such contributions, except for the existing prohibitions applicable to non-residents.

It is arguable that under the old system the citizen paid in any event, he was merely, and blissfully, unaware of his contribution. In the end, the generosity of the corporations was at his expense.

Thus it is heartening, up to a point, to read in recommendation 23 that any registered party will be limited to a maximum of 30 cents per elector in the aggregate of the electoral districts in which that party has candidates.

The point at which depression sets in occurs in the paragraph immediately following. This recommends that the limitation be reviewed after the first general election in which it has been in effect. In other words, experience will provide a basis on which it will be raised in accordance with need, as estimated by the interested parties.

When state medicine came in, the doctors' bills went up. Once the committee has established its new principle — often the difficult part of an operation — we may be reasonably certain that the same thing will happen to the expenses of state-subsidized parties.

Certain notions of economy are, it must be conceded, built into the scheme. These are at the expense of other, non-political, organizations. Thus broadcasters, as a condition of licence, are to provide without compensation 50 per cent of studio production costs and broadcast times allocated to the parties. Newspapers, currently out of favor in high places, will be required to supply and sell advertising space to registered parties and candidates at the usual per-unit rates charged to their most active and favored customers.

The notion of the "registered" party, although perhaps still strange to most Canadians, may already be found in embryonic form in the Canada Elections Act. There is evidently a growing belief among members that politics in this country is and ought to be confined to the four vested political interests now represented in the Canadian Parliament.

Registration, if the committee has its way, will acquire tangible meaning. Although automatic for old parties (such as the New Democrats), it will be attainable by new ones only if they have 50 candidates officially nominated by the 28th day prior to election day.

Voters being notoriously unreliable, there can be no guarantee that such arrangements will suffice indefinitely to maintain the four-party status quo. But it does appear that the committee is doing what it can to put the skids under groups of outraged citizens who may in future feel that the existing political organizations are inadequate for their needs.

Taxpayer Reaction

Taxpayer reaction to these proposals cannot be safely predicted. Citizens may or may not welcome the opportunity to share in subsidizing the electoral literature (notoriously unreliable) which will be mailed to their doors. Any assessment should make due allowance for the fact that the recommendations of the committee represent only a modest beginning.

This emerges with clarity from recommendation 26, the significance of which should not be lost on taxpayers. "We recommend that, except for the broadcasting subsidies . . . the possibility should stand over for consideration at the same time as limits on spending will be reviewed."

Sufficient unto the day. The second instalment, chargeable to the nation's valiant taxpayers, will be revealed to us following the next general election.

Letter to the Editor

Apology Due City

In view of the controversy reported recently with regard to my attitude towards the Hare Krishna group, I felt I should make known my thoughts and feelings on this subject — not so much as a defence but more to set the record straight with another and necessary side of the story given to enable a better overall picture to be obtained.

First may I say I am definitely not opposed to this group or to any other religious group or order. As a matter of fact, I would strongly support those who do turn to religion because I know they have an influence for good, and religion is generally conducive to law and order in any community. Usually kindness and tolerance to others is the prevailing philosophy.

We have had many complaints with regard to the actions of this particular group on our streets and, may I say, some of them very indignant indeed.

I am sure you will agree that there is a great difference between license and liberty, and it is only when people rudely intrude on the rights of others that I would make objection. My description of this group as reported in the paper was, I must admit, somewhat unfortunate. It was not to be public but that, by now, is beside the point.

However, I must say that I was angry at the time with their conduct during the royal visit in Centennial Square when they, with complete disregard for the feelings of others, imposed and intruded upon thousands of people and deprived many hundreds of those attending of possibly the only opportunity they will have in their lives of enjoying the visit of Her Majesty The Queen and the other members of the Royal Family. Now surely, in fairness it must be acknowledged that the vast numbers of people in the Square had some rights.

It may be of interest to know that the news of their disturbance or intrusion during the Royal Visit had reached Britain — and was reported in the London Times to be precise. This has not helped the good name of the City of Victoria and in my view these people owe the city an apology.

It seems to me from my position that there appears to be much concern of the rights of minorities, so much so that the rights of the majority are overlooked. — J. Courtney Haddock, Mayor.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"I'LL LOOK IN ON DENNIS DURING THE COMMERCIAL."

Looking Back

From the Times of June 16, 1911:

June, the month of roses, has been a rosy month for Victoria if the healthy condition of the realty market is any reflex at all. Only half of the month has elapsed and yet, it is asserted, record figures have been scored in the sale of property in the city. This mid-season revival of activity is welcomed as a good omen for the real estate business in the fall, at which time it generally assumes an aspect of renewed activity.

Calculated Imprecision

By JAMES RESTON
From Washington

IN his life-long study of the art of diplomacy, Sir Harold Nicholson reached the conclusion that imprecision of language was one of the greatest barriers to successful negotiation between nations, and this is proving to be true once more in the Paris talks on Vietnam. Scarcely a day goes by without some official here in Washington assuring the American people that the U.S. is "withdrawing" its troops from South Vietnam, or without some official on the other side demanding that we set a date for "withdrawal." But the more they talk, the more vague the meaning of "withdraw" becomes.

Reston

One day officials here talk about withdrawing "all American troops" from Vietnam and occasionally "from Indochina," which is not the same thing. Another day, they speak of withdrawing "all ground troops" from Vietnam, which could mean leaving the Air Force and the aircraft carriers behind.

Similarly, the North Vietnamese and Liberation Front officials are masters of the art of obscuring their meaning behind ambiguous language, for when they demand that the United States announce "a date certain for withdrawal" it is never clear whether they mean withdraw all American troops physically from Vietnam and or Laos and Cambodia, or whether they mean "withdraw" all military and economic aid from Saigon as well.

The result is that we are all left to guess at the intentions of the negotiators, and the tragedy of it is that the prisoners of war and their anxious families are caught in this thicket of two-faced words.

Here, for example, is President Nixon saying in his last news conference: "It always comes back to the same thing. If we end our involvement in Vietnam (another and more sweeping phrase) and set a date, they will agree to discuss prisoners — not release them. . . ."

On the other hand, there is former Secretary of Defence Clark M. Clifford putting forward a more precise plan to "end our participation in the war cleanly and permanently" and adding that he has reason to believe his plan would be accepted by the other side. He is at least precise in his proposals:

"The United States," he says, "would agree to: (1) withdraw all U.S. military personnel from South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia by December 31, 1971; (2) end all ground, air and naval activity by U.S. forces in South Vietnam, North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia by the same date.

"North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front would agree to: (1) return all U.S. prisoners, held by North Vietnam and the NLF, within 30 days from the date of the joint announcement by Hanoi and Washington of this agreement; (2) refrain from attacks that would threaten the safety of U.S. military personnel during the period of withdrawal."

Clifford added that he believed that language could also be agreed upon that would provide for no reprisals during or after the period of disengagement, but instead of being asked to prove his point, he was criticized by the White House spokesman for playing politics with the war and raising false hopes on the prisoner issue.

Honest men can and do, of course, differ fundamentally on Clifford's terms, but at least he was clear, and presumably can demonstrate that Hanoi and the NLF agree to his formula. The need at this point is to cut away the tangle of obscurities and get at least a concise basis for discussion.

Propaganda Battle

All we have now is a propaganda battle and this can only get worse by involving the negotiations in subjective presidential politics. Even before the White House lashed out at Clifford without even finding out what evidence he had that his plan would be accepted by the enemy, Sen. Edward Kennedy was implying in public that President Nixon was holding back his main negotiating card until it could be a factor in the 1972 presidential election.

This is probably just a sample of what we are going to get later on in the campaign, and the closer we get to the voting, the more difficult it will be to get a clear definition of the terms of peace from either side.

It is hard to escape the conclusion that the administration has not yet made up its mind on so clear and final a withdrawal as Clifford proposes. It is not imprecise by accident but on purpose, and it is clearly irritated with Clifford because he was putting forward a plan which might save our prisoners and other troops but place the South Vietnamese Government in jeopardy.

This is the heart of the problem. The administration is not saying that Clifford's plan would not "get the boys back home." It is saying that Clifford's December 31 deadline is "so precipitate that it would not give the South Vietnamese the opportunity to defend themselves and determine their own future."

That, rather than the prisoners, is what explains the administration's calculated impressions. The stability of South Vietnam is still Nixon's first priority.

The Sirens Are Sounding For the Fires at Home

By T.R.B.
New Republic

We think a tremendous shift of public attention is now going on in America that may be the dominant feature of the 1970s.

There are fascinating signs of it everywhere. Right in the midst of spraying the fire hose on Europe and Asia we have suddenly noticed sparks shooting up in our own neighborhood; whose house is that? — hey, help — it's our house!

Grim Connection

If you take that as your key you will find a grim connection between some of the oddest kinds of incongruities in American news: the Senate turmoil over the number of U.S. troops in Europe, say, and the ghetto riot in Brownsville, N.Y., over state relief cuts; the sickening discovery that a lot of our conscript sons in Vietnam are becoming heroin addicts and the accelerating determination to end the adventure and get back to home affairs; the deep-seated reluctance of most Americans to get mixed up in the Middle East, along with the shock of seeing law-and-order Democrats in sedate Philadelphia nominate a pistol-whipping cop for mayor.

Is the connection far-fetched? Well, we must ameliorate our problems at home or go in for repression; one or the other, there isn't much time to choose. A nation that has gradually got overextended abroad is suddenly becoming aware of brutal problems at home, racial, social, economic. They won't wait.

Take hunger. It is easier to visualize it in personal terms. "About a month and a half ago," Senator Mondale (D — Minn.) told the McGovern Committee, "I went to a small elementary area school in our small ghetto in St. Paul. They had a splendid cafeteria and a very balanced meal, a warm meal, salad, and about every fifth child could not afford it. One child, whom I will never forget as long as I live, was about six or seven years old. She had a filthy dress on, and she sat at this table amidst the other children eating their good meal, eating a chocolate cookie. She had a little dirty bag that she brought, that her mother had sent, and two other chocolate cookies. And I asked the principal, how can this happen? And he said, 'We still don't have the money to pay for lunches when the families can't afford it.' I assume there are millions like her in the country, that sit amidst their friends at lunch who have a decent meal, and they don't. It's a disgrace."

That hungry kid with three cookies at school represents America. The U.S. has six percent of the world's population and about half the world's resources but an income distribution that awards 77 percent of total income to the top half of the population, and only 23 percent of total income to the lower half.

America Is Stingy

The fact is, America is stingy. As Swedish economist Gunnar Myrdal notes: "America of all rich countries (is) the one which has the highest rate of unemployment, the worst and biggest slums, and which is least generous in giving economic security to its old people, its children, its sick people and its invalids."

President Nixon, to his great credit, has introduced family assistance welfare legislation and Rep. Wilbur Mills has picked up the ball. There's a lot that's wrong with the Nixon proposal and the Senate may kill it as it did last year; but it does accept one revolutionary concept, the right of the disadvantaged poor to basic income maintenance.

Pretty communistic, eh? Here's how one man put it: "Every man has the right to life and to the means which are necessary for the proper development of life; these are primarily food, clothing, shelter, rest, medical care and finally the necessary social services." I may not have rendered this smoothly, it's a translation from the Latin, Pacem in Terris, by Pope John XXIII.

Senate majority leader Mike Mansfield is a kindly, courteous man. Time and again he has argued the urgency of problems at home and declared that, 26 years after the war ended, the U.S. does not need half a million persons in Europe, including dependents, with 7,000 tactical nuclear weapons, or even 128 generals. Nobody paid much attention. Then, suddenly, the mouse roared. Mansfield gave the White House a terrible scare. He crisply demanded that we pull out half our troops in Europe, at once, now. He caused a tremendous commotion and he left no doubt of the shifting American interest from problems abroad to those at home.

This is not isolationism. It is merely that what happens in NATO and what happens in Brownsville are connected. The United States cannot be the staunch defender of the free world if its foundations crumble at home. Europeans might as well know that the pendulum is swinging, and that the long-suffering Congress, in sour revulsion after six years of executive deception and arrogance over Vietnam, is in the mood to assert itself. Mr. Nixon would be wise to adjust policies lest the pendulum swing too far.

The mood in U.S. cities is "more frighteningly explosive" now than in the violent summers of 1967 and 1968 warn Urban Coalition chairman Linowitz and Sen. Fred Harris, co-chairman of the Kerner Commission. Brownsville was a sign — a "peaceful" protest over welfare retrenchments — and suddenly fires were crackling and mobs rioting: 84 fires, 25 looted stores, 33 injuries.

Over in Philadelphia the dominant political machine nominated Frank Rizzo, a self-styled "tough cop," for mayor, pledged to "law and order." There's no use being too ominous about all this, of course, but maybe soon we must choose between reform and repression.

The Kerner Report in 1968 warned that urban society is dividing into a black, central-city subculture and the white, affluent suburbs. Like most presidential commissions the report would be forgotten by now save that the permanent U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, under tough-speaking Father Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, keeps its message alive. There's a new Hesburgh report: things are no better than 1968, it says; maybe worse.

They search an airplane after a bomb threat. But for the nation as a whole we are pretty much used to the warning. "There may be a bomb on board."

Debunking of a Myth

THE TORONTO STAR

A new myth has risen lately to complicate the problem of the growing foreign control of the Canadian economy. It is that of the so-called "multi-national corporation."

This myth focusses on the great industrial complex, with their global networks of subsidiaries which have become such a feature of the world economy in this century. (Some economists claim that 500 of these enterprises will soon account for half the total output of the Western world.)

The idea has arisen that these "multi-national" monsters are so powerful that they are beyond the control of any individual nation. If they are to be regulated at all it must be by some international agency.

From this it follows that it is futile for Canada, for example, to try to lay down any rules for the operations of such giants as General Motors or General Electric, even on its own soil.

A wholesome corrective to these notions is to be found in a speech delivered at the University of Waterloo recently by Walter Gordon, a pioneer in the battle for Canadian economic independence.

Mr. Gordon points out that most of the so-called multi-national corporations, however they may ramify throughout the world, have their head offices in the United States. This means that their decisions, which affect employment, wage rates, export policies, location of plants, and the expansion or contraction of production in many countries, are made by Americans.

He cites two recent instances of this from the automobile industry, which provides one of the best examples of an industry dominated by "multi-national" concerns.

A few months ago, Henry Ford visited Britain and was reported as saying that his company would make no more investments in Britain if the 30,000 employees of the Ford Motor Company of Britain were "unrealistic" in their wage demands.

A little later Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, was quoted as saying in Toronto that political pressure would be brought to bear on the U.S. Congress to discontinue the Canada-United States auto pact unless the wages paid in Canadian automobile plants were increased to the U.S. level.

Mr. Gordon comments: "There are those who may think wage levels in Britain are too high and therefore that Mr. Ford's threat was quite in order. There are others who may think wage levels in Canadian automobile plants are too low and therefore that Mr. Woodcock's threat was understandable.

"But the question to be asked is whether two Americans, both of whom are very powerful in their respective realms, should be in positions to influence the course of economic events in Canada. I think not.

"On the contrary, I submit it is high time that the mystique of the multi-national corporation and all the unfettered power that goes with it should be debunked."

Mr. Gordon also debunks the notion that only some kind of international authority is appropriate to control the multi-national corporation. We live, he points out, in a world of national states and there is no international authority in sight that could control 500 of the world's most powerful corporations. National governments like that of Canada will have to do the job, each in its own territory.

Mr. Gordon suggests two methods by which this could be done. One is the establishment of a federal agency to supervise the conduct of foreign-controlled companies in Canada and to review proposals for new investments by foreigners in Canada, including proposals to acquire existing Canadian companies. Moves of this sort not considered to be in Canada's national interest could be vetoed.

The second is the enactment of regulations to ensure that the senior executive officers and a majority of the directors of all Canadian corporations over a certain size — whether foreign-controlled or otherwise — should be Canadian citizens resident in Canada. This should be combined with legislation requiring large Canadian companies to be 51 per cent owned by Canadians. Exceptions to these rules could be made in suitable cases, and extensions of time could be permitted where necessary to allow a gradual change of ownership.

Methods similar to these have been used by other countries, such as Mexico, Japan and Sweden, and have enabled these countries to absorb a large amount of foreign investment without losing control of their own economic life. They should be equally successful in Canada, whether we are dealing with a "multi-national" giant or a humbler concern from south of the border or overseas.

The Canadians Are Coming!

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Since time immemorial locusts have descended upon the land. They have been awaited with dread; met with fear. The same could be said of the Northmen who ravaged the coasts of England and Europe. So feared where they that townspeople used to end their prayers with, "and God save us from the Northmen." Genghis Khan, Attilla the Hun, the Spanish conquistadores — history has been full of armies on the march, of fathers locking up their daughters, of shopkeepers boarding up windows.

In Canada today the mood of townspeople is somewhat similar. The difference is that the anticipated plague is not an invading army, not the act of a wrathful God; it is youth on the move.

Spread Manure

In Charlottetown residents are threatening to spread liquid hog manure around proposed tent city sites and the Prince Edward Island Legislature has passed a miniature War Measures Act to ensure the peace. In St. John's, Newfoundland, a Council member wants "chains to be put across roads leading into the city and anyone without $100 in his pocket should not be allowed in."

There's a tent city proposed for Toronto which Alderman Arthur Eggleton says would create a volatile freak show. Alderman Thomas Wardle would have youths join the army if they want to travel. Etobicoke residents are afraid of an outbreak of syphilis. North York Councillor Mel Lastman sees youth hostels as hotbeds of perversion.

And so the story goes.

But on the other side, spokesmen for travelling youth are just as irrational. "If we don't deal with it (the travelling youth problem) we'll have a hell of a problem, like Vancouver had last summer — riots, kids arrested . . ." Hugh Harvey of the Edmonton United Community Fund says. He's trying to get Edmonton authorities to help the kids by telling them the kids will tear the town apart if they don't watch out.

'Big Trouble'

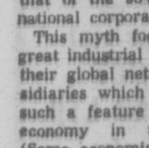
In Toronto defenders of the travellers are saying much the same thing. "They're coming! They're coming! They can't be stopped and if help isn't offered there's going to be trouble, Big trouble." The theme is being repeated across the country.

Among the few sane voices cutting through the raucous shouts coming from both sides is that of Danny Makarus of Edmonton. He is director of the city's program for assisting travellers. "They've been trying to sell the idea (of the city's program) on the basis that if we don't feed and house these kids we'll all be murdered in our beds," he says.

"I think all this has been done to create opposition among the public. Actually, there are more short-hairs than long-hairs travelling the country. Many of these youngsters are either looking for a job or just taking a vacation. What most of them really are is junior tourists."

What's happened to reason in this melee of emotion? Why are so many succumbing to this wild rhetoric? Where are the other sane voices saying it's kids like those living next door that are travelling? They're not descending like Vikings; they won't be leering, slavering maniacs ready to put the torch to your front porch.

Perhaps we should all end our prayers with, "and God save us from extremists, pro and con."



Weather to Grey the Spirit

By ART STOTT

It hasn't been the worst June in memory, just a miserable month with weather so uncertain that it greys the spirit. The unwilling gardener turns more unwillingly to his plot. The house fix-it man goes about his outdoor fixing reluctantly, not always rained off the jobs but uncomfortable as light downfalls trickle inside the neckband of his sweatshirt. He looks seaward, hoping for release in a short fishing jaunt, and the breeze stiffens, building a lumpy strait. Not the worst June, but unsatisfactory after earlier unsatisfactory months which provided only teasers of sunshine — a few brief days of promise unfulfilled.

Yet there have been Junes which seemed to dump an unending downpour on Vancouver Islanders intent on outdoor recreation. In a day when two-week vacations were standard in most offices, and juniors took their holidays when seniors did not want them, rain fell on a tent we pitched by Cameron Lake — and fell and fell and fell.

There was no danger of forest fires during that fortnight. The trouble lay in trying to coax a small campfire, circled in rocks on the small, sandy beach, into sufficient strength to fry breakfast bacon and boil coffee water. The canvas of our shelter fought off the precipitation valiantly, but the inside developed a cold sweat. Rills ran in the small ditches we scooped around its perimeter. Bedding grew damp, though not quite wet.

Yet somehow it was a good holiday. Morning brought its cold plunge in the lake, bone-chilling but providing the contrast which made the day seem warmer. The bacon crisped and the coffee, once the water was heated, brought its cheerful warmth. Body heat lent comfort to our clothes. During brief breaks in the rain, the world around us glistened. Water, trickling down hill, sent out its small melody.

We climbed, that year, up the side of the mountain lifting from the lake, zigzagging up the slope between salal that rose above our heads over a rough trail broken by washouts. The slogging was hard.

Finally, above a mountain creek, we came to heather fields on a broken saddle near the peak. The sight was our prize for the climb, the crisp greenery forming a rough carpet, with the dainty, almost perfect purple bells of the flowers shiny in the wet. Across a gully, too deep for that day's foray but seeming only a stone's throw away, gleamed the snow fields of Arrowsmith in cold purity.

We slipped and floundered back down the trail, soaking but content. We had been and we had seen. And the small fire kindled in the damp camp seemed to have additional warmth, sending steam from our clothing, heating a banquet of canned beans and strong tea.

Another wet June, holiday time we could not waste, found us in a rustic cabin by another lake, listening to rain on the roof, warming ourselves by a rusted stove, reading by a coal oil lamp. Life regained simplicity. It was enough to dry out, heat back the chill and cook plain meals.

That was a year when a young man returned to fishing he had abandoned in late boyhood. Rain dimpled the surface of the water. A keen ear could pick up the tiny chime of its striking. The trout were biting.

The oars of the small rowboat swung in rhythmic dip, pull and recovery. The rod tip jiggled with the strike of cut-throats. Excitement raised body heat in the brief contest, reeling in.

On shore, the dark green of conifers rose up surrounding hillsides, clean-washed, with the lighter shade of maples splotching the cover and russet lakeside brush shining under lush foliage.

At evening a doe and her fawn stepped gracefully through the bush, coming to drink at a lake free of summer crowds. A loon called its crazed lament near the islands and, in brief breaks in the clouds, robins sang their rain song.

Not the vacation we would have chosen, perhaps. No golden sun beating its somnolence onto young bodies stretched in languor by a still, warm lake. But still a time of re-creation, days of freshening, clean air to be savored like good wine and uncomplicated adjustment to unseasonable weather.

Now the present month limps through its uncertain hours, raw at times, wet, unpredictable, disagreeable — a period to grey the spirit. Or has the spirit lost its ability to banish the grey?

Venus Gold Mine Goes Bankrupt

VANCOUVER (CP) — The managing director of Venus Mines near Carcross, Y.T., confirmed Tuesday that the silver-gold ore operation has gone bankrupt and a receiver has been appointed.

Debenture holders who furnished about $4.5 million to put the property into production are the principle creditors. They are a banker group headed by Arcturus Investment Development Ltd., wholly-owned subsidiary of Chase International Investments Corp., which furnished $3,361,000.

"Notwithstanding any number of engineering reports from the geological point of view, the mine was unable to develop and find sufficient ore to maintain production at the mill's design capacity of 300 tons daily," said Venus managing director F. M. P. Warren.

Chartered accountant A. D. Stanley of Vancouver has been appointed receiver.

Venus shares were 12 cents when the Vancouver Stock Exchange suspended trading Monday. They were first offered to the public in February 1968 at 80 cents a share.

The shares went to a high of about $2.80 a year before production. There are about 3.3 million issued and outstanding.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

EDITOR: G.S. KENT

Cornat

Cornat Industries Ltd. reports net earnings of $336,478, (11 cents a share) for the six months ended April 30, compared with $232,762, (8 cents), the previous year.

There was a gain on sale of shares in Rempel-Trail Transportation Ltd. and Public Freightways Ltd. in connection with the acquisition of 50 per cent of Johnston Terminals and Storage Ltd.

In a separate report, the subsidiary Coronation Credit Corp. Ltd. reported net earnings of $368,845, (10 cents), for the six months, compared with $329,619 (nine cents), for the same 1969-70 period.

Berncam

In its first annual report since becoming a public company, Berncam International Industries Ltd. of Montreal reports sales of 2.6 million vs. 2.38 million the year before.

Net earnings amounted to $243,356 (40 cents a share) compared with $196,569 (32 cents).

The company intends to broaden its range of textile-based companies producing apparel for men and women, drawing on centralized management and financial Potter reported sales up by 40 per cent, or $548,727 vs. $390,348 a year earlier, leaving profit of $12,492 compared with $30,382 in 1970. Working capital is up, from $315,269 to $498,266.

The company said it has been selling bottled goods, rather than vending liquor in bulk as others often do at lower cost. It now has case goods accepted in eight U.S. states and plans to add one state a month besides expanding European markets.

Potter

The high cost of penetrating U.S. and foreign markets was given as a reason for a sharp decline in profit of Potter Distilleries Ltd. for the six months ended Feb. 28.

Royal

The Royal Trust Co. has approved in principle the formation of a company to provide interim financing for residential, commercial, industrial and other construction in Canada.

The proposed company, believed to be the first of its kind in Canada, will be a joint venture of Royal Trust and Conill Corp., parent company of Continental Illionis National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, eighth largest bank in the U.S.

The company will "handle the type of financing a builder or developer requires from the start of his project until completion of construction when the final long-term lender advances the mortgage money," Royal Trust said.

Decalta

Western Decalta Petroleum Ltd. reports net income in the first quarter of 1971 amounted to $420,000 or 5.9 cents a share, compared with $346,000 or five cents a share in the first quarter of 1970.

Cash flow from operations amounted to $1 million, a 10.9 per cent increase from last year when cash flow was $939,000.

Improvement was primarily due to higher revenues from net oil sales, up $165,000 or 14.5 per cent to $1.3 million. The increase was derived from larger volumes sold and a higher price for crude oil.

Western Decalta said it has acquired 79.1 per cent of the total outstanding common shares and 98.7 per cent of the preferred shares of Western and Texas Oil Co. Ltd.

Aquacare-Pascar

The Ontario Securities Commission has suspended trading indefinitely in shares of Aquacare International Ltd., of Vancouver, and Pascar Development Corp. Ltd., Virden, Man.

A spokesman for the OSC said the companies had failed to file certain financial statements. To have trading resumed in Ontario, they must file "material acceptable to the commission" and apply for permission to have their shares traded.

The indefinite suspensions follow temporary suspensions — issued June 7 on Aquacare, maker of water purifiers, and June 10 on Pascar, a mining development firm.

Evans

An increase in 50,000 mobile home deliveries to 450,000 along with 1.85 million conventional housing starts this year is projected by Evans Products Co., which expects a substantial increase in profits.

Last year the company had $11.39 million ($1.83 a share) net earnings on sales of $561 million. First quarter earnings are well up, from just over $1 million to $1.88 million, and for the first four months profit is up 15 per cent.

Small Producers Seek Mill Pact

URANIUM CITY, Sask. (CP) — Businessmen here are optimistic that an agreement can be reached with Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. to handle uranium ore produced by local firms.

The optimism developed following a meeting with William Gilchrist, president of Eldorado.

The meeting was organized by the Uranium City committee on uranium sales and development and sought the use of Eldorado's milling facilities if the small firms could find a market for their uranium reserves.

Committee chairman Ben McIntyre said Gilchrist indicated he would be willing to sit down and work out costs and methods for handling ore when an independent sale of uranium had reached the negotiating stage.

"His encouragement and suggestions, his optimism about uranium and this area were more than we expected," McIntyre said.

The committee consists of 12 companies and individuals in the Uranium City area, 460 miles northeast of Edmonton, holding property containing rich showings of pitchblend in amounts varying from 200 to 200,000 tons of ore.

Matri Exploration Ltd., one of the larger companies involved, is working as a marketing agent for the consortium. The group hopes a joint sale could provide capital for futher exploration into promising deposits.

AUCTION OF ASSETS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan of the British Columbia Supreme Court approved an application Monday by the Bank of Montreal to allow a public auction of the assets of the Glulam Products Ltd. of Vancouver.

Glulam, a company which specialized in laminated beams produced under a new fast-curing process, went bankrupt recently.

It ran into financial difficulties after a number of laminated beams produced by the company were found to be faulty.

Major Test Friday On Trudeau Experiment

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The first fruit of the Trudeau government's major experiment in participatory democracy will be harvested Friday in the form of legislation to change the income tax system.

It will be moderately sweet for those on subsistence incomes, somewhat bitter for those in the middle range and probably tastier than first imagined for corporations and capitalists.

Whether the entire experiment will prove as sour as it has seemed during the last 19 months probably will be decided by the taste of future historians.

When the government published the tax white paper Nov. 7, 1969, and invited public discussion of the proposals, the idea was to stimulate a snappy, for-and-against debate.

But a real debate opened only this spring after Eric Kierans quit the cabinet.

HAD A PLAN

The original plan was to follow the idea of government outlined by Prime Minister Trudeau in a general comment just a year earlier:

"My ministers and I are men like others, but particularly adept at the proper framing of questions," he said then.

"We then seek the answers with the rest of the country.

"I feel this is the only manner by which ideas and then political decisions can be crystallized. It is the only way they will be just and win acceptance.

"It is above all essential that everyone participate, that each has a feeling of responsibility and the desire to convince or be convinced."

It was on the prime minister's last point that the tax-change experiment seemed to go sour. Only a tiny minority took part. That minority consisted almost entirely of businessmen.

The discussion was all one way, reflecting an overwhelming desire of the business community to convince the government to scrap or drastically modify the tax proposals.

In the main forums of debate —the Commons finance committee and the Senate banking committee—only 100 of the combined total of 1,073 briefs were submitted by individuals. And most of those represented business interests hostile to some or all of the tax proposals.

The remaining 973 were from corporations, business associations and professional groups, except for a half dozen non-business groups.

Only a handful of participants attempted a disinterested view of the whole tax proposal package.

The academic community stood aloof: Only one economist presented an economic assessment separate from personal interests and just two students offered views to the Commons committee.

MOST WEREN'T HEARD

The vast majority of the nine million taxpayers thus were unrepresented in the discussion. The four union groups that appeared before the parliamentary committees, though pledged on paper to a fairer tax system, also hammered at the way new tax rules might hurt their organizations.

The upshot was virtually no debate.

Against the one-way hostility, Finance Minister E. J. Benson was left by his cabinet colleagues to carry the defence alone against the hostility of the business community. He was hampered by his pledge from the outset that the tax white paper was not policy and alternate ideas were welcome.

Perhaps the main reason for lack of wider participation was the complexity of the proposals. Only the moneyed could afford the time and expertise to make knowing assessments of corporate and capital tax proposals, or example.

Ironically, a real debate opened up only on the virtual eve of the final decision after Eric Kierans, the communications minister, quit the cabinet April 29.

HITS TAX IDEAS

He has been ripping apart the tax philsophies of successive Canadian governments and, by implication, the new tax laws. He offers detailed analyses that show they are bad for the development of Canada and employment, too good to mining and foreign subsidiaries.

BENSON
. . . a time of testing

The debate came too late on at least one front. The government had yielded last August to an outcy that new tax proposals on mining industries would wreck the economy and rewrote them more favorably.

Another $14.3 Million Waste

OTTAWA (CP) — Following are highlights of Tuesday's parliamentary committee meetings:

COMMONS

Public accounts—The auditor-general's report on government spending revealed a $14.3 million defence expenditure on a navigational and flight control system that never worked and a loss of $40,000 on caps to go with unified military uniforms because the cap visors tended to buckle and bubble.

Agriculture—An amendment was passed making landed immigrants fully covered under the proposed bill to stabilize Prairie farm incomes. But Otto Lang, minister responsible for wheat, also made it clear foreign citizens farming in Canada, while liable to make payments into the stabilization fund would not be allowed to draw from it.

Justice—The chairman of a special committee of the Canadian Bar Association said the proposed young offenders bill is excellent in theory but that sections of it are impractical in the light of some provincial facilities. A. J. McComiskey said such facilities as detention homes and training schools generally do not exist outside large urban areas.

Broadcasting—Stuart Griffiths, president of Bushnell Communications Ltd., said Canadian Radio-Television Commission policies are making it difficult to maintain television programing standards. He said the commission should allow private broadcasters to own all or part of local cable companies to secure income and as a basis for maintaining and expanding current programing.

SENATE

Legal affairs—Phyllis Haslam, executive director of the Elizabeth Fry Society, said police should have nothing to do with investigating prisoners hoping for a pardon. She and A. M. Kirkpatrick of the John Howard Society said good behaviour, as opposed to a clean record, should have nothing to do with granting of a parole.

JOINT

Constitutional—The National Indian Brotherhood said Indian rights now in the constitution must not be changed without full consultation with Indians. The Indian community now is studying Indian claims under the constitution and will have no final submission to make to the committee until after the study is completed.

NO FUNDS FOR FARM

OTTAWA (CP) — The two U.S. citizens suspected of planning to start a marijuana farm near Prince George had received no funds from the Opportunities for Youth program before their trial last week, the Commons was told Monday.

Hugh Faulkner, parliamentary secretary to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, also said the project for which the funds had been approved originally now has been suspended.

The Disgrace Of Canada's Retarded Few

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—Irvin Tremoyne, chronological age 18, mental age 8, had his first brush with the system of justice when he was fonud walking off with a bag of pocket books from a Salvation Army drop-in box.

He was arrested, jailed for psychiatric evaluation, then released on probation. Later he was jailed again for car theft, and in February this year, Irvin hanged himself at the provincial jail in Fort Saskatchewan, Alta.

Perhaps 15 per cent of the estimated 30,000 inmates of Canada's prisons and jails are mentally retarded. The percentage is based on a guess by Ontario authorities; nobody seems to know for sure.

The Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, which is trying to find out, said Tuesday the treatment of these children-in-adult-bodies is criminal.

The association told the Canadian Congress on Criminology and Corrections that it amounts to a national problem.

About 600,000 Canadians are mentally retarded.

Anna Stephenson of Toronto, chairman of a special committee on legislation as it affects the retarded, said several provinces are trying to improve things.

However legislative changes wouldn't help until there were methods of evaluation and facilities for appropriate care and treatment.

SHOULDN'T BE JAILED

Mrs. Stephenson said the retarded should never be locked up as criminals. Her audience agreed.

The anguished mother of a retarded eight-year-old boy told the conference she is "pushed aside" when she seeks help for her child.

It was no wonder many parents sent retarded children to institutions. But how did they feel, she asked with desperation, when they read of events at the Rideau Regional Hospital School at Smith Falls, Ont.

In recent months one young man from the school hanged himself at the farm home where he had been working as a ward. Another suffered frozen hands when forced to shovel a 300-foot driveway at another farm in sub-zero weather.

"I don't want to see anyone who is retarded inside a jail. Please do something about it," she appealed.

Fishermen Vow Strike

VANCOUVER (CP)—Contract talks involving the price of salmon between 4,500 British Columbia fishermen and the Fisheries Association of B.C. broke down Tuesday with the union negotiators threatening strike action by June 26.

"We are recommending to our members that they reject the company offer of about four per cent on various species and vote in favor of a strike," Homer Stevens, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union said Tuesday night.

Association members paid 39 cents per pound for sockeye salmon, 30 cents for coho, 14½ cents for pinks and between 15½ and 17½ cents for chums last year.

Mr. Stevens said the association has offered to meet again with the union Tuesday following the strike vote results.

Escaping Politicians For Real Clowns

By PETER McNELLY

I knew something wasn't on the level the moment we entered the Memorial Arena and met the circus official.

"You're the reporter who's going to be a clown, aren't you?" said the official. "Wait over there for a moment."

He whispered something to my wife, and she suddenly broke into that short, nervous laugh women make when they walk over an air vent in a fun house and their skirts get blown above their waists.

"Now," said the official, finished telling jokes to my wife, "I'll take you to the clowns."

★

The official told me proceeds from the Shrine Circus went toward charities for crippled children and asked me to mention that in the newspaper. Then we entered room six, the clown's room.

"Hey Mike," yelled Rex Young, head cown,, "get your straight razor; this guy's moustache has got to go."

"Sorry kid," Rex told me, "I told them we couldn't use moustaches."

Rex gave the once-over and decided the moustache could stay.

"You have to work with the face you've got. We'll make a character out of you."

He sat me down on a green steamer trunk, pulled about 16 jars of cream and powder out from somewhere and proceeded to remake my face.

"Stay loose, kid," he said, "and let me know if I'm hurting you with this make-up. And don't worry about it, it'll wash off in about a week."

Rex Young Transforms Reporter McNelly into a Lovable Buffoon

You know," Lee said to Rex, "he looks like a young Emmett Kelly."

Lee asked what I'd been writing about lately, and I said I'd been covering the constitutional conference.

"Well," said Lee, "this isn't going to be much of a change, then. You should feel right at home with us clowns."

They Take Great Pride in Their Work And Are Quick to Praise Others

We did three numbers. The first was a fire routine. About five of us scrambled madly into the centre ring, squirting hoses in all directions, never quite finding the burning house.

A giant boom went off somewhere, and Rex rolled out of the house in a motorized bathtub, waving his arms, shouting and steering like a drunk hot-rodder.

Back in the dressing room, the midget Jimmy Armstrong took off his fireman's cap and winked at me. Then he sat near a locker and started to sing about a renowned lady of dubious character.

In the next stunt we were all in the army. No matter how hard Sgt. Rex tried to keep us in line, Jimmy, Mike Plunkett and the rest kept flopping around.

Then it hit, a great white disc of shaving cream, right in my face. That, I discovered later, was what had made my wife laugh.

"Sorry about that," said Rex later. "Your boss told us to do that."

For the third routine, we dressed up like apes and did a musical number.

"It's a good life," said Lee.

"Yeah," said Rex. "You know, like the sawdust in your veins, something like that."

Sawmill Destroyed As Workers Scramble From Sweeping Fire

Three men barely escaped as fire flashed through a sawmill near Point Ellice bridge this morning.

The mill was destroyed in a matter of moments with preliminary loss estimated at $50,000.

"We just had enough time to get the hell out of there," said co-manager Bob Bell.

Flames left only charred timber and the crumpled tin roof of the ancient mill owned by Dalziel Box Co. Ltd., at the corner of David and Turner Streets.

The other co-manager, Reg Hopkins, said he noticed flames and smoke coming from a room housing a diesel engine beneath the saw platform he and worker Bill Swift were working on.

Hopkins, who has seen at least three major fires in his 47 years with the company, gave up attempts to reach an extinguisher as flames licked up the saw belt beside him.

●

The fire broke out about 10 a.m. and swiftly engulfed the small mill which lies alongside the Point Ellice division of B.C. Forest Products. Some small piles of lumber adjacent to the burning building were also destroyed.

BCFP workmen, trained to fight fire, laid their own hoses alongside the burning mill and soaked down lumber piled there.

The entire on-duty force of 20 city firemen turned out in four trucks to fight the fire, in the heart of Victoria's fire-sensitive mill district. It was under control in less than an hour.

Saanich and Oak Bay fire departments went on a pre-arranged standby notice in case any other blazes broke out in the city.

Hopkins said it would be impossible to gauge the loss accurately until there was opportunity to study the state of machinery and foundations.

Cause of the outbreak has not been determined but deputy chief R. J. (Carl) Coates said a short circuit in the diesel room wiring was a possibility.

The company operated the only cedar mill in Victoria, producing airplane spruce and boat lumber. Over 2,500 feet of lumber was in storage around the mill.

A short time after the Dalziel fire was brought under control, city firemen were called to Herald and Douglas where roofing tar had caught fire.

Workmen were heating the tar but an open valve in the heating device had gone unnoticed and liquid tar had flowed to tar blocks stored nearby, setting them ablaze.

UNIONS PLAN MEETING NEXT WEEK

Retirement Centre Site Stirring

The first steps were taken Tuesday towards a construction start on a multi-million-dollar luxury retirement centre in Oak Bay which may become a new focal point of the eight-month Sandringham Private Hospital strike.

Trucks began dumping large quantities of fill at Cadboro Bay Road and Bowker Avenue, site of the National Nursing Homes Ltd. of Vancouver project.

Rezoning of the land, part of which touches Cranmore Road, was granted by Oak Bay council last December.

National Nursing Homes Ltd., which sought the rezoning, also manages Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, where 28 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees have been on strike since Sept. 30 seeking a first contract. The hospital has continued running with replacements taking the strikers' places.

Oak Bay municipality is expected to issue a building permit shortly for the retirement centre, which is estimated to cost around $5 million.

A trailer identifying the contactor as Inter-Island Construction Ltd. has been moved on to the site and a shack is being built beside it.

John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, said Inter-Island has agreements with the carpenters and laborers unions but is a prime contractor so much of the work will be sub-contracted.

The fill was being moved to the site by trucks from Chew Excavating Ltd., which Schibli said is a union firm.

Asked if there will be action by the unions on the construction project, he reiterated past comments that he is sure that contractors bidding on the work "would be keeping their mind on the (Sandringham) feud and adjusting prices accordingly."

He added: "I would assume that there will be union firms on the project. However, that doesn't say that the building trades as such may not meet and consider what might happen inasmuch as the building trades council has been giving strong support to Sandringham strikers."

The building trades council will be meeting in one week "to discuss this," he said.

HELPED BY SCHOOL BOARD

Operation Recycle Gets Space

Operation Recycle received permission Tuesday from the Greater Victoria school board to use the basement of Braefoot elementary annex as a temporary depot for storing collected materials.

The non-profit organization, which has operated since February, recently received a grant of $20,070 under the federal Opportunities for Youth program. The grant will pay wages of 20 students during the summer.

Barbara Corry, who appeared before the board's construction and maintenance committee, said Operation Recycle needs a depot in which to store paper, glass and metal before shipping it up-Island or to the Mainland, but can't afford to rend a warehouse.

"I expect we may eventually make money and even eventually rent our own warehouse," she said, but added that making a profit on the enterprise is not particularly important.

Greater Victoria residents can deliver certain kinds of wastes to about 40 sup-depots which are located at houses in the area. Location of these sub-depots can be obtained by phoning 477-1863.

Operation Recycle also has copies of a sheet of instructions on how to separate and recycle garbage.

Extensions Urged For Uvic Profs

The three University of Victoria faculty members whose contracts were not renewed should get one-month extensions pending the outcome of hearings into the affair, faculty president Charles Doyle said today.

See earlier story on Page 51.

Doyle said the board of governors should grant the extensions because the hearings, which opened Tuesday, are not scheduled to resume until June 28, two days before the contract expiry date.

●

"This will afford the board of governors the opportunity to be magnanimous and announce a one-month extension to these contracts," Doyle said.

The delay is good from another point-of-view, he said, because it will allow University of B.C. Dean Bernard Riedel, a member of the investigating panel who was appointed only this week, to familiarize himself with documentation related to the cases.

Ask the Times

Q. Is marijuana a narcotic? R. B.

A. Under the Narcotic Control Act marijuana is legally considered a narcotic. But the executive director of the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C. in Vancouver says this is pharmacologically inaccurate. He describes marijuana as a drug that should be dealt with under the Food and Drug Act. This is not possible under current legislation because the Food and Drug Act cannot be repetitive of the Narcotic Control Act.

Q. What does "HB" on my HB pencil stand for?—W.S.

A. HB stands for Hard Black. The HB is in the middle of the range that varies from the softest pencil used for artwork and the hardest pencil used for drafting. The degree of hardness of a lead is a measure of how much the lead resists abrasion by the fibres of the paper being marked on.

arthur mayse

WHILE THE HARD-nosed gentlemen from Ottawa and the provinces speak their minds in closed session, here is a much briefer utterance to chew on. It was made by the wife of a Quebec mayor who accompanied her husband on a group junket to Victoria several years ago.

This lady from the fair province looked out over the beautiful city where it took the sunset light. Then she murmured as much to herself as to those around her: "To think we might have lost all this!"

Those were words from the heart. They said much. I value them because they give substance to a feeling that has come on me in one or other of the separate Canadas, each unique, that combine to make the whole.

There is a town on the Nova Scotia south shore that we once arrived at by a road bordered with cornflower and yellow-eyed daisies. As age is reckoned in Canada, it is very old, and it lives on intimate terms with the Atlantic in all its moods.

A French navigator — De Monts, who sailed that way in 1604 — lost a sheep overside and named the dint in a rugged coastline Port Mouton. The name became Mutoon on the tongues of the South-of-Englanders who came later.

It is a town that lives at peace with its history in a Canada that I was only vaguely aware of before we went down to Nova Scotia. May the larger Canada never lose it!

In a land so enormous as this, it is always a temptation to settle for the narrow horizon and the insular attitude.

For that reason, I am glad that my luck has permitted me to live in, or at least visit, some of those other Canadas.

Not all of them, or even enough of them. Like most Canadians, I don't know my homeland anything like as well as a dweller in it should. But now and then, and here and there, I have felt the sense of heritage that overtook the mayor's wife whose horizons had been expanded.

It does me good, sitting here the widest part of a continent distant, to be aware of Montreal. Of all our cities, this is the most vital. It is supremely arrogant, temperamental and effervescent. It is tough, dangerous, good-humored, and possessed of a joy of life which is all its own.

More than anything else, Montreal is alive. It is not merely a great city — it is an experience I could wish for every Canadian at least once in a lifetime.

I have also felt that sense of heritage in the Canadas that lie beyond the towns and cities.

In northern Ontario, for instance, when autumn is on the land and the woods are ablaze for mile on endless-seeming mile with such reds and yellows as this soft island climate can never kindle.

Or on the prairies: and I think that anyone who has lived in that Canada can never completely accept enclosed and obstructed country.

Having lived there, even though long ago, I can understand why Manitobans or Saskatchewaners transplanted to the far west sometimes find adjustment hard to make. They feel "closed in" — they miss the wide sky and the sweep of vision that is blocked only by the curve of the earth.

My own Canada is quite otherwise, and I can never be away from it for long before homesickness sets in. Yet like the others it is part of the whole, made so by the processes of a Confederation that was completed only in 1949 when Newfoundland became a province.

We might have lost all this. We could still lose it. Make no mistake about it, the withdrawal of one partner or block of partners from Confederation would be the beginning of the end.

It's a sobering possibility. As a Canadian, I hope this present conference will steer us farther away from it.

HIT THE DIRT

BIDDERS BEING SORTED OUT IN CANUCK FINANCIAL MESS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of Royal Securities are busy separating the bidders from the bystanders in the Vancouver Canucks financial mess that has left the ownership of the National Hockey League club in limbo.

Informal inquiries have been received from prospective bidders for Medicor's 601,000 shares of Northwest Sports Enterprises which are presently impounded to cover the transfer of $3.5 million in Northwest funds out of the country by Medicor, the club's owners.

"We have had numerous inquiries and we're sorting out the bidders," Frank Allen, Vancouver manager of Royal Securities Corp., said Tuesday.

Meantime, as the Thursday afternoon meeting of the Northwest board of directors nears, Montreal Trust was reported to have received a letter Tuesday from a city legal firm representing Medicor and its president, Thomas Scallen and vice-president Lyman Walters, saying that the $3,505,000 removed to the U.S. would be repaid on Thursday.

"It is not the first time we have heard this," said Oscar Lundell, secretary of Northwest.

"However, just paying the money won't necessarily allow Medicor to get back its position. Its shares are still impounded by the Montreal Trust and the superintendent of brokers will have to be satisfied."

Lundell said there was still no word from Scallen or Walters as to whether they will attend the board meeting. The four Canadian directors, who sparked the situation with a letter to shareholders last Friday disclosing the financial transaction, say they will not stand for re-election.

J. A. Van Luven, president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Tuesday he hoped that trading in the shares of Northwest Sports could soon be reinstated.

It has been halted since Friday, when Canadian directors reported the situation of the company funds and the fact that a June 10 deadline had been passed by Medicor.

"I hope Northwest can be reinstated in a matter of days," said Van Luven.

"I am awaiting a statement from the company — a statement that will tell the shareholders something on which they base the price of the stock. This could come out of the directors' meeting. We are anxious to reinstate the stock as quickly as possible."

William Winnett, executive vice-president and chief financial officer of Northwest, said the superintendent of brokers Tuesday returned half of the company's books seized Friday.

"They (office of the superintendent of brokers) have made their examinations and we expect to have the rest of the books back by this morning," Winnett said.

Giants Back on Track; Horlen in Comeback

Bryant Hurls 6-0 Shutout Over Phillies

By The Associated Press

The wild, wild West is getting out of hand and San Francisco Giants needed a tough slinger to silence that swaggering bunch from Los Angeles.

Ron Bryant, as tough a slinger as the Giants have right now, pitched the first complete game of the team's June flop, a four-hit 6-0 win over Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday night.

It was only the Giants' fourth victory in June, a month which cost them ground in the National League's West race. Since the first of the month, San Francisco's lead of 10 games was whittled in half to five by high-riding Los Angeles Dodgers.

In other league games, Los Angeles blanked New York Mets 2-0, San Diego Padres topped Montreal Expos 3-1, Chicago Cubs whipped Atlanta Braves 3-1, St. Louis Cardinals trimmed Cincinnati Reds 6-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates beat Houston Astros 3-0.

CAN'T HIT FAST BALL

"When he (Bryant) has the curve ball working he is as good as any pitcher in the league," said San Francisco manager Charlie Fox. "Nobody hits his fast ball."

Bryant was able to get the first batter in every inning except the fourth, when he walked Deron Johnson.

Alan Gallagher ended an 0-for-27 slump with a two-run single to back Bryant's pitching.

Al Downing kept Los Angeles rolling with a five-hitter and Maury Wills knocked in the Dodger runs with a two-run single in the fifth inning off New York's Nolan Ryan.

PINCH HIT WINS

Pinch-hitter Larry Stahl doubled home the tie-breaking run and Angel Bravo added an insurance tally with a sacrifice fly as San Diego came up with two runs in the ninth to beat Montreal.

Leron Lee opened the Padres' rally with a one-out double and raced home with game winner on Stahl's shot down the right field line. Stahl, who went to third when Rusty Staub fumbled his hit, eventually came in on Bravo's long fly to right.

PEPITONE AGAIN

Joe Pepitone beat Atlanta for the second straight day, leading Chicago's victory with a two-run single in the first inning to back Bill Hands' three-hitter. Pepitone, hitting in his 14th straight game, delivered a three-run homer in Monday's 3-2 triumph over the Braves.

Chicago Pitcher In First Win Since Year Ago

By The Associated Press

It took Joe Horlen's magical healing powers just 29 days to transport him from the operating table to the pitching mound. Now, after a year-long struggle he has also recovered his winning touch.

Horlen, who made a remarkable comeback a month ago from his second knee operation since last August, hurled Chicago White Sox past Detroit Tigers 6-1 Tuesday night for his first victory since last June 19.

Bill Melton's grand slam homer and solo shots by Mike Hershberger and Rich McKinney provided solid backing for the 33-year-old right hander, who scattered eight hits in going the route.

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee Brewers overhauled Baltimore Orioles 6-5, New York Yankees cooled Kansas City Royals 2-1, Minnesota Twins topped Cleveland Indians 5-3, Oakland Athletics belted Washington Senators 8-2 and California Angels nipped Boston Red Sox 5-4.

NEEDED SURGERY

Horlen, a double-figure winner for seven consecutive seasons, slipped to 6-16 last year and was forced to undergo surgery on Aug. 4 for the repair of torn cartilage in his right knee.

Dr. Gerald Loftus, who operated on Horlen, said he'd probably be through for season. But Horlen returned to action after 34 days, working six times in relief in the final month.

But April 4, when he suffered torn cartilage in his other knee, another operation was performed.

This time, the projected recovery period was six to eight weeks. But Horlen was exercising the damaged leg three hours after the operation—and pitching in relief on May 4, 29 days after surgery.

BREWERS COME BACK

Milwaukee spotted the Orioles a 4-0 first inning lead, battled back to tie the game in the sixth and then floored the defending world champs on John Briggs' leadoff homer in the ninth.

The Yankees snapped Kansas City's six-game winning streak on a two-run homer by Bobby Murcer and the five-hit pitching of Steve Kline.

BILL WALKER

To whom it may concern. Now that hockey is a continuing sport, can football be far behind? Not likely. The B.C. Lions opened training camp today. The exhibition schedule opens July 5. It's getting so a fellow doesn't have time to turn around any more.

To the puck sport for a moment (why not?), and a pat on the done for Punch Imlach for pointing up how ridiculous things can get at the draft meetings . . . Imlach used Reg Fleming as an unwilling yo-yo as he attempted to pry players loose from other clubs . . . Fleming was on and off the protected list nine times . . . The way it works now, them that has will still have when the draft is all over, and things won't change until the protection rule does . . . Cut it to 13 or 14 players and then, only then, will it be more meaningful . . . Besides, Montreal Canadiens made the amateur draft appear rather ludicrous as well . . . by various manoeuvrings, the Habs got seven of the first 31 picks. Which isn't bad, for the Stanley Cup champs, when it is noted that there are 14 clubs in the league . . . That's performance!

●

When Bobby Lalonde, ex of the Canadien juniors, and now a Canuck, was being interviewed on the Tely, he answered the query regarding his height this way: "Five feet, six and one-half inches." That extra half-inch sounded awfully important, and perhaps it is. For that puts Lalonde half an inch taller than another rather famous French-Canadien star, Aurel Joliat was only five feet, six inches, and weighed about 135 pounds. One of his playmates of that era was Johnny Gagnon. He was five-feet-five. Howie Morenz? Oh, he was a giant, something akin to Andre Boudrias. He was all of five-feet-nine. It will be nice for the Canucks if Lalonde can match up to those pony stars of the past. On the other side of the coin, Gene Carr, Red's lad, is "big" at six feet, one inch, and he weighs 185 . . . And the betting is that ex-Maple Leaf coach Frank Mario branded him as a sure-fire hit for St. Louis . . . Frank likes that kind.

Meanwhile in Washington, D.C., the Senators' owner Robert Short is being asked to ante up the $130,000 in back rent he owes for RFK Stadium . . . Some hotels are asking for the money belonging to them too . . . All of which has started the rumor mill grinding that Dallas, or Toronto, may be the next home of the Senators . . . Short has denied Dallas, but not Toronto . . . And what with the success enjoyed by the Expos, perhaps the time is ripe again or baseball in hogtown . . . Out of Toronto too comes a Canadian hope for a pentathlon medal at the Pan-Am Games . . . Debbie Van Keikebelt is the logical choice to represent Canada in the event, but she may have distinguished company from the west . . . Debbie last month scored a record 4,965 points in the eastern trials . . . the western winner, who also surpassed the games standrd of 4,500, is Penny May of Victoria . . . Both could make it to Colombia . . . both should.

It was odd, too, that last week when the soccer Royals were goalie hunting, they had a player in their back yard, who is almost as good as anybody anywhere, but couldn't play . . . Iam McFaul, netminder for Newcastle United and Northern Ireland, is here on holiday and was in fact in a back yard — Jim Irvine's at Ladysmith . . . Now that the Royals have a date to play the visiting Hong Kong team Sing Tao here next month, the word is out that McFaul will play . . . English League players are allowed to play here, but in exhibitions only . . . Which brings up the case of Jackie Charlton, currently in Vancouver and who will conduct a clinic here next month . . . Charlton, it is said, will compete in Vancouver against Sing Tao and will be asked to do likewise here . . . football should be that lucky!

●

DISA AND DATA — Jackie Wilson, the ex-Victorian, is the big man in lacrosse in Calgary, Leon Hall reports . . . and the game, at the minor level, is going ahead by leaps and bounds . . . Hal Laycoe, too, had every right to feel annoyed at the news report which suggested he wouldn't be around as Canuck coach after Christmas . . . The rumor was that Vic Stasiuk would be the new boy . . . and after the great job that Laycoe did with what he had last year . . . tch . . . tch . . . And, oh, yes, the Canucks now have officially been banished from the Western Hockey League, which means, among other things, that they won't try to put a WHL team here, and also, that if they ever want back in, it will cost them the tidy sum of $200,000 . . . that's the going price of a franchise these days . . . and a note for Little League long-hairs . . . players engaged in playoffs this year may be asked to have their hair cut in a conventional manner . . . failure to comply will result in not being allowed to play . . . that's all!

ACCENT ON YOUTH AT ANNUAL MEET

Accent will be on youth development when the 24th annual Y-Times track and field meet is staged July 9 and 10 at Centennial Stadium.

Sponsored by the Victoria YM-YWCA and the Daily Times, the meet this year will drop open events from the schedule in order to present a full sate of age-class contests for boys and girls between the ages of 11 and 16, inclusive.

Meet officials hope the new format will play a part in the development of future stars.

Entries will break down into peewee (11 and 12), bantam (13 and 14) and midget (15 and 16) age brackets.

Athletes are expected from all the Greater Victoria clubs, the remainder of Vancouver Island, the Lower Mainland and there is a possibility that contingents will be coming from Seattle and Portland.

Competition will start at 5:30 p.m. on Friday (July 9) and conclude on Saturday, when events begin at 9:30 a.m.

Older athletic enthusiasts will also have their turns on the stadiums all-weather track.

Scheduled on the Saturday program are three events for runners of 35 years or older. Men will be aiming at a time target of seven minutes, 30 seconds in a "joggers' mile' 'and 100-metre sprints are carded for both men and women who have been out of competition for at least five years.

Plate Favorite Gets 'Super Horse' Rating

TORONTO (CP) — Some of Kennedy Road's top opposition appears to be backing off even before the start of Saturday's 112th running of the Queen's Plate.

The big bay colt owned by Mrs. Art Stollery of Toronto and trained by Jim Bentley won the second division of the Plate Trial Sunday by 7¾ lengths.

Chatty Cavalier, owned by George Gardiner of Toronto and trained by Lou Cavalaris, won the first division of the trial.

"He might not beat Kennedy Road but he's a nice horse," Cavalaris said of Chatty Cavalier.

"Kennedy Road is a super horse," said Mort Hardy, who brought Briartic home third behind Lord Vancouver. "I don't know if we'll try him in the Plate."

Briartic beat Kennedy Road in the Marine Stakes last month, but that was Kennedy Road's first race in a comeback from an operation last winter in which a bone chip was removed from his right hind ankle.

But Kennedy Road has won his last two starts, including Sunday's Plate Trial, and is regarded as the favorite to win Saturday's $50,000 added classic for Canadian-foaled three-year-old Thoroughbreds.

The horses carried 126 pounds over the Trial distance of 1 1-16 miles. They carry the same weight in the Plate distance of 1¼ miles on a dirt track.

Larson Survives Wild Night on Hill

Some fine infield work managed to nullify the effects of seven bases on balls and preserved a one-hit shutout for Ken Larson as Bate Construction lanked Seaboard Construction 1-0 in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Two double plays kept Bates out of trouble in the second and fifth innings.

Larson struck out nine batters for the pitching victory while loser Glen Bullen, whose performance was free of bases on balls, struck out four and scattered five hits.

Don Lancaster singled in Harv Stevenson for the winning run in the seventh inning to bring Bates a three-game league lead.

METS SIGN YOGI'S BOY, GIL'S LAD

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets have announced the signing of Larry Berra Jr., son of first-base coach Yogi Berra.

The younger Berra was signed as a free agent. He was not selected in last week's baseball draft of free-agent prospects.

The Mets have also signed Gil Hodges Jr., son of their manager.

Bourdase Tops Field; B.C. Bowler Ninth

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Ed Bourdase, bowling in his hometown, outclassed the field to win the $37,500 Fresno open bowling tournament Monday night.

Bourdase, 42, whose only other Professional Bowlers Association victory came last year in Los Angeles, averaged 223 for 42 games and breezed home by 258 pins over Dave Davis of Miami, Fla., a runner-up for the second straight week.

Earning 30 bonus points for each match game victory, Bourdase won 16 of his 24 matches to total 9,387, and win first prize of $4,000. He had taken the lead to stay in Sunday's final qualifying round.

Don Carter, making a comeback after a 15-month layoff, finished third. Carter, a Hall of Famer now bowling out of Tarzana, Calif., averaged nearly 218, including a 300 game Sunday, in his first appearance in a PBA finals in two years.

Jack Major of Vancouver finished ninth with an 11-13 record and 8,405 total. He won $850.

Basketball Event Set at Vancouver

OTTAWA (CP) — An international men's basketball tournament will be held at Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum July 15-17, the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association announced Tuesday.

The U.S. Pan-American Games team, a team from the Republic of Panama and one from Canada will compete in the round robin exhibition tournament.

New Tourney Format

Eleven Vancouver Island players, led by defending-champion Carl Schwantje of Victoria Golf Club, are entered in the B.C. Amateur golf championship, beginning today and ending Saturday at the Quilchena course in Richmond.

A total of 106 golfers, including a number from the United States, have entered the 72-hole medal affair. This is a new format this year and marks the first time there will be no medal play.

GOLF OFFICIAL DIES

Hot Pants Crash Ascot Scene —Man in Velvet Left at Gate

ASCOT, England (Reuter)—The wind and the rain were not enough to put a damper Tuesday on Britain's ritziest race meeting.

The horses — equine and clothes — cut their usual fancy figure despite a downpour that made the course a sea of mud.

It was opening day at Royal Ascot's four-day summer meeting, an annual extravaganza for fast horses and fashionable women.

Britain's premier earl, the Duke of Norfolk, banned hot pants from the royal enclosure, but several girls dared to wear them. Even a man showed up in a pair — of green velvet. He was turned away at the main gate.

PALMER STILL HOPES . . . . . TO SWEEP MAJOR TITLES

Arnie's Time Running Out

"Time is running out."

Palmer, 41 but still one of the chief contenders in the 71st U.S. Open golf championship, took a long look at himself and the game he has helped popularize before teeing off in a practice round Tuesday.

"My long-range goal is the same now as it was in 1960 (when he won the Open and the Masters). It's the same as Jack Nicklaus': Win all four major championships in a single year.

"I think it can be done, and I think I can do it."

He paused, then smiled again.

"But each year that goes by it becomes more and more unlikely.

"I have a lot more, a lot different interests now than I did in 1960. Then I just wanted to play the best golf in the world. I was only 30 years old.

"I still love the game, love to play it. I can't think of anything I'd rather do. But as you grow older, you develop different, varied interests. You have to, or you're going to be in big trouble."

"Right now, I just want to keep on playing. I want to keep on winning tournaments and, if possible, winning major championships."

He hasn't won a major championship—the United States and British Opens, the Masters and PGA—since the 1964 Masters.

But, off his performance this season, he ranks behind Nicklaus as one of the prime candidates for this year's U.S. Open tourney, which starts Thursday.

Palmer, the game's all-time leading money winner and the most popular player the game has ever known, is enjoying his best season in three years.

He has won twice and has more than $109,000 in winnings, fourth on the list, this season.

Former Champions Survive First Round

Upsets in today's second-round matches at Uplands were, of course, a distinct possibility, but four former champions could be stepping to the tee for Thursday's semi-finals in the Victoria City and District women's golf championship.

Advancing to quarter-final meetings after surviving the first round of match play Tuesday were defending-champion Dale Shaw and qualifying-round leader Joan Lawson. Other former winners advancing to the second round were Margaret Tod and Shirley Naysmith.

Miss Shaw, who plays out of Glen Meadows, moved ahead with a decisive 5-and-3 victory over Irene Horne of Gorge Vale while Mrs. Lawson toured her home course in fine fashion to crush clubmate Esther Barnes, 8 and 7.

Victoria's Mrs. Todd advanced 6 and 5 over Ivy Blunt of Gorge Vale while Shirley Naysmith of Gorge Vale downed Lee Budden of Cowichan, 6 and 5.

FACES LUBMATE

Miss Shaw was to meet Gorge Vale's Nita Moody today while Mrs. Lawson faced another clubmate in Jeanie Hopps. Mrs. Moody had Tuesday's toughest struggle, downing Jane Fall of Cowichan 2-up while Miss Hopps was a 4-and-3 winner over Corinne Campbell of Royal Colwood.

In the other half of today's draw, Mrs. Todd faced Elsie Saunders of Gorge Vale and Mrs. Naysmith met Lil Thirlwell of Uplands.

Mrs. Saunders remained in the championship race with a 5-and-4 win over Maureen Hibberson of Uplands and Mrs. Thirelwell ousted Florence Champman of Royal Colwood, 5 and 4.

Semi-finals begin at 8:30 a.m. Thursday and the championship final is set to begin at 10 a.m. Friday.

Cents Gain Tie For Top Berth

Century Inn moved into a share of first place with Langford Drywall by nipping Sooke Merchants 2-1 in an extra-innings Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League encounter Tuesday at Heywood Avenue Park.

In the other game of the evening, Bell's Men's Wear moved into a third place tie with Colwood Inn after unleashing a 17-hit barrage to thump William Head Steelers 12-2 at William Head.

The Century win, snatched after two extra innings and just before darkness would have forced an end to play, came when Gerry Lavender singled home Rejean Beauchamp with the winning run in the bottom of ninth inning.

Jim Kennedy scored on catcher Eric Walker's sacrifice fly to give Sooke a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning but Gord Rutherford doubled in Bob Custance to tie the game for Century in the fifth inning.

Undefeated Tillicums Clip Combos

Tillicum Athletic Club extended its unbeaten streak to nine straight games by downing Esquimalt Junior Combos 11-5 Tuesday night in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game at Beacon Hill Park.

Victory helped Tillicums retain a four-point lead over runner-up Cablevision Juniors, who defeated Independents 12-1 in another game at Lochside Park. Barb Tribe drove in four runs and Jennie McHattie batted in three to pace the rout.

In the other game, Westendale Constructionettes crushed CFB Roadrunners 20-5 at Naden Field.

Senators Beat Trade Deadline

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland Athletics traded infielder Jim Driscoll to the Washington Senators Tuesday for a player to be named later.

Driscoll, 26, was playing for the Oakland farm team in the American Association.

The deal was completed Tuesday night as the trading deadline in the major leagues passed almost unnoticed.

FIGHTER, VICTOR, REPORTER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The late-night caller was reporting to The Associated Press on the Florida middleweight championship fight at the Jacksonville Armory.

Then came the details of a six-round knockout by Riggs against Tommy Torino of Hollywood, Fla.

Asked to identify himself at the end of the report, the caller said: "Oh, this is Dennis Riggs."

Victoria Shamrocks have a chance tonight to move within two points of leading New Westminster Salmonbellies when they play Burrards in a Western Lacrosse Association game in Vancouver.

Shamrocks are currently occupying the runner-up slot, four points behind Salmonbellies and an equal number of points ahead of Coquitlam Adanacs. Burrards are in the cellar with six points.

In the battle of statistics, Bill Robinson of Coquitlam has taken over the individual scoring lead with 46 points, including a league high of 26 goals. Vancouver's Gord Frederickson is the second spot with 45 points from 19 goals and 26 assists.

Aftab's Batting Show Brightened Dull Match

OXFORD, England (Reuter) — Aftab Gul confirmed his standing as Pakistan's top opening batsman when the touring team's rain-wrecked cricket match against Oxford University faded to a draw here Tuesday.

With Monday's play washed out and a blank morning Tuesday, there was never any question of a result.

The only bright feature of the match for the Pakistanis, who go into the second test against England Thursday, was Aftab's batting.

In an hour's batting before the close Tuesday, Aftab hit an unbeaten 64 as the Pakistanis moved to 83 for no wicket.

Investors 'Misled' By Commonwealth

VANCOUVER (CP)—A British Columbia Supreme Court jury was told Tuesday that statements made by the Commonwealth Trust Co. that the company was "owned and operated by Western Canadians" were incorrect.

Former Commonwealth Trust president A. G. Duncan Crux agreed, after questioning by Crown prosecutor R. D. Plommer, that a substantial amount of stock in the company was owned "in form" by Garantie Establishment, a Swiss financial firm.

Crux is on trial before Mr. Justice A. B. Macfarlane for alleged theft and false pretences involving $715,462 in securities of three Kelowna investment firms.

Under cross - examination, Crux said the statement contained in the trust company's 1967 annual report that it was "owned and operated by Western Canadians" was "incorrect to a degree." But he denied a suggestion by Mr. Plommer that the statement was designed to mislead.

"There was no effort to conceal (information about the Swiss interest in the firm). The various government auditors knew about it," he said.

SOLD SHARES

Earlier in the trial, Crux testified that in 1960 he sold 4,999 of the 10,000 common voting shares in Commonwealth Investors Syndicate, the parent of the trust company, to the Swiss firm.

Crux owned 5,001 of the total shares until 1966 when one more share was transferred to Garantie, giving it 50 per cent controlling interest.

Mr. Plommer read to the court portions of a letter from Richard Humphrys, director of the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corp., written to Commonwealth Trust after the company had been made the first Canadian trust company to qualify for insurance of depositors' funds.

In the letter, Mr. Humphrys told Crux he was "shocked and dismayed" at loans made by the company to Beach Gardens Holdings, a B.C. firm then developing a large curling rink and motel complex at Powell River.

Crux told the court he too had been dismayed when he discovered the extent to which the trust company granted loans to Beach Gardens Holdings. The loans got out of control and climbed to $2.2 million, he said.

TAKING CONTROL

Crux said at the time the loans were granted he had just begun to try to resume control of the company after having partially withdrawn from it in preparation for retiring completely. He said much of the decision-making during that period was handled by others in the company.

Crux testified that he approved an original loan of $700,000. There was a cost overrun and he approved further loans, he said.

He told the court when he was asked to approve additional loans bringing the total to $2.2 million, he flatly refused but eventually felt he had to sign after being told the money needed for approval by him had already been spent.

He signed because to refuse at that point would have jeopardized Commonwealth's position with the entire loan, he said.

Crux agreed with Mr. Plommer that the Beach Gardens loan situation "was a bad deal which got worse."

He also agreed with statements in a report by Antonio Rainville, chairman of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corp. that the Commonwealth Trust Co. in 1968 was losing $25,000 to $27,000 a month.

Cross-examination of Crux, now in its ninth day, was expected to be completed today.

Environment Department Spreading Out

Four federal agencies on Vancouver Island are included in the new department of environment created in Ottawa last week.

They are the Forest Research Laboratory on Burnside to be known as the Pacific Forest Research Centre, the Marine Science branch, 1230 Government Street, the Meteorological Branch at the Victoria International Airport, and the Fisheries Biological Station in Nanaimo.

The department is headed by Jack Davis, who will also retain the title of minister of fisheries.

A government spokesman said the forestry and fisheries department form the nucleus of the new department.

It consists of six branches — atmospheric environment service, fisheries service, lands, forest, and wildlife service, water management service, environmental protection service and finance and administration.

The main goals of the department is to carry on established resource programs and service and to clean up and control pollution.

Druggists Told to Police Profession

VANCOUVER (CP) — Druggists must police their own profession against abuses by a minority who dispense too numerous prescriptions to some welfare recipients, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday.

"Some senior citizens have more pills in their homes than you have in your stores," he told 200 delegates to the British Columbia Pharmacy convention.

"And some medical men are writing prescriptions like they are going out of style."

Unnecessary or too-frequently filled prescriptions increase government costs without any justification, said the minister.

"You can't legislate integrity. I like integrity but I don't like laws. You should be able to weed out those who are giving you a bad name. Some people in every profession want to make a fast buck.

"You owe society something, too. It is not always the government's responsibility to control abuses."

Mr. Gaglardi said he was hopeful of implementing some recommendations made to him with regard to revising and raising social assistance service charges.

"I have your presentation and I think you're going to get part of what you're asking for," he said.

In an interview later, Mr. Gaglardi said he could not reveal anything further about his plans because he still had to present his proposal to the provincial treasury board for acceptance.

"The government probably hasn't done as much as we have been asked to do for you people, so I know this isn't the most popular place for a fellow like me," he told the delegates.

"But I like to get into the centre of the cyclone—then I can figure out where to go.

"In a way, I wish you people could get more business and make more money and pay more taxes—maybe I'd get my jet airplane back again."

In an hour-long address, Mr. Gaglardi also took swipes at consumer crusader Ralph Nader, at young protesters with shaggy hair, at labor unions and at employers who wanted too much profit.

He said drug costs have raised 50 per cent in the last few years.

"That's not fair," he said. "Somebody is making money."

Frank Neale, chairman of the meeting, president of the B.C. Pharmaceutical Association, told Mr. Gaglardi pharmacists are also worried about the number of pills in some senior and welfare homes. But it is difficult for druggists to police, he said.

John Little, president of the B.C. Professional Pharmacists Society, said afterward that he agreed with much of what Gaglardi said.

But druggists have had no increase in social assistance fees since 1954, he said, though returns of doctors and manufacturers were constantly rising.

CALI, Colombia (CP)—This equatorial city of a million persons is winning its battle to be ready for the Pan-American Games, to be held here July 30 to Aug. 13.

But it hasn't been easy.

Cali is located 3,000 feet above sea level in the lush Cauca Valley, between the west and central ranges of the Andes. And for the last year it has been battling the elements to meet Games commitments on time.

Dr. Jorge Herrera, general director of the Games, says:

"Despite the worst winter rains in 70 years, we will be ready. Of that you may be sure."

Canada will have approximately 450 athletes and officials here — the largest contingent she has ever sent overseas. Only the United States and Cuba expect to have larger representation.

An hour-by-hour schedule in Spanish — the only one currently available — shows outdoor events will begin in the morning, breaking off for a siesta during the hot part of the day and resuming in the evening.

In all, 4,000 athletes are expected to take part in the 17 sports on the calendar.

Massive Gymnasium to Seat 18,000

One segment, called the Alberto Galindo unit, features a massive gymnasium seating 18,000 for basketball and gymnastics. This is located near the new velodrome, which features a 250-metre cycle track and seats for 7,500.

Close by is the Cali bull ring with 16,500 seats. Bull fights will be suspended for the duration of the Games and the boxers will perform there.

The Jose de Clark unit includes swimming and diving pools with seats for 7,000, a new baseball diamond and a small gymnasium. The ball field will have 5,000 permanent and 2,000 temporary seats.

Focal point of the San Fernando unit is the 62,000-seat Pascual Guerrero Stadium, expanded from 35,000 seats. It wil be site of opening and closing ceremonies, track and field, soccer, and the final-day equestrian event.

Athletes and officials will be accommodated in nine new housing blocks at University of the Valley. New kitchen facilities are being completed and the entire development will house students after the Games.

Proudest single achievement of the Cali organizers is the 18,000-seat gymnasium in the Alberto Galindo unit.

It is believed to be the largest of is type in the world, featuring a variation of the suspended-roof construction pioneered by the German pavilion at Expo 67 in Montreal.

Although Cali is nearly on the equator, organizers say its altitude of 3,000 feet should keep the temperatures relatively comfortable for the athletes from 31 countries.

The altitude still is low enough to enable the athletes to perform without suffering from oxygen lack.

There are precautions to take, however. Smallpox and yellow fever shots are mandatory; and it's advisable to become immunized against typhoid and tetanus.

Hill-Davies Pair In Tennis Semis

Vivian Davies and Nancy Hill gained the women's doubles semi-finals on Tuesday by defeating Sandra Moss and Brenda Cunningham 6-1, 6-3 in the annual Racquet Club of Victoria tennis tournament.

Other results Tuesday:

R. and D. Thompson defeated D. Senese and D. Cameron, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.
B. Ayers defeated H. Morrison, 6-0, 6-3.
B. McMynn defeated M. Ayers, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.
B. Waters defeated F. Berry, 0-6, 6-3, 6-2.

No Strings On Grants

TORONTO (CP) — An agreement which gives amateur football a no-strings grant of $50,000 and complete autonomy for the first time has been reached between the Canadian Football League and the Canadian Amateur Football Association.

The CFL grant, to be made in 1972, is to support "the development of minor football in Canada," and was part of an arrangement worked out between president Jack Rockett and executive director Peter Mercer of the CAFA and commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the CFL.

Mercer said more than 60 per cent of the total grant "will be earmarked for annual minor development."

Harvey's Hits Pace Farmers

Barry Harvey connected for hits on all three trips to the plate Tuesday to drive in two runs and help Farmer Construction take a one and one-half game lead in the Senior Amateur Baseball League with a 5-4 nod over Gorge Hotel at Royal Athletic Park.

Victory came on two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning and contained a measure of revenge for Farmers, who were upset 4-1 by Gorge on Sunday.

Bob Mabee, who hurled his sixth victory without a loss, connected for a sacrifice fly to score Strongman and Pete Jolly came across the plat on a throwing error by George Holt for the winning run.

Pie Gets Into the Sky

Veteran flier Claude Butler of Central Saanich took some pie (lemon, his favorite) into the sky with him as he took off this morning from the Victoria airport to London and the B.C. centennial air race.

Accompanying him in his twin-engine Aerostar 601 was co-pilot Harold Aasen of Vancouver, who gave him the pie.

Butler, 59, of 1785 Verling, has more than 4,000 flying hours under his belt and Aasen is no novice at the airborne game. He was a pilot with the RCAF during the Second World War and taught navigation.

SHORT DELAY

Scores of his employees and neighbors were on hand to bid Butler "bon voyage" this morning.

They had to wait awhile.

The plane's E.T.D. (expected time of departure) was held up for almost two hours.

Taxiing out on the tarmac, the scissor on the plane's starboard hydraulic brakes jammed. This was the first time Butler had a full load of gas aboard, plus the 100-gallon extra tank in his mid-cabin. New lines had to be installed that would take the extra strain.

ON OXYGEN

The delay gave Aasen time to strap the oxygen tank to the rear of his seat. He and Butler will be on oxygen most of the way, cruising at about 250 knots at altitudes between 25,000 and 28,000 feet.

They also have a letter from Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith for the Lord Mayor of London.

Butler says he's making the race because, "It's a good cause — I believe in strengthening the ties between us and the Old Country."

His wife, Jean, says it's because he'll be realizing an ambition to fly trans-ocean — a dream he's had for many years.

With a final, "See you in three weeks," Butler and Aasen were airborne and off on 7½-hour first leg to Montreal.

The race starts July 1 in London with those that make it flying over a finish line between Gonzales Observatory and the radio beacons on Trial Island July 7.

Interview Payments To Lawyers

Provincial help for legal aid societies in the form of $8 an interview will be available in B.C. July 1.

The plan was announced last week by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson at the annual B.C. Bar Association meeting in Penticton.

Peterson told the meeting the payments would be available in centres without full-time legal aid staff, which includes all areas except Vancouver.

Victoria's present legal aid facilities are operated and financed mainly on a volunteer basis by members of the law profession.

At present there is no fee or payment for legal aid interview, but lawyers are paid for court appearances — $30 a day in provincial courts and $50 a day in higher courts.

Defence Paper Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Competition from constitutional and fiscal matter has forced a delay in cabinet consideration of Canadian defence policy, it was learned Tuesday.

As a result, the government's defence white paper is not now expected to be published before summer. The white paper will elaborate basic policy and priorities laid down by Prime Minister Trudeau in a statement April 3, 1969.

The defence department had hoped to publish the white paper before Parliament rises for the summer June 30. Originally, the document was to have been made public before Easter.

Before the Judge

A 40-year-old man who ordered a sirloin steak meal at a local restaurant without money to pay for it was fined $35 Tuesday by Judge William Ostler when he was found guilty of obtaining food by fraud.

Court was told that Russel W. Townsend, 760 Lampson, went to Paul's restaurant on Douglas Street June 5 and ordered the meal.

He said he had lost his money when he finished eating although he admitted to an investigating officer, who testified at the trial, that he knew he had no money to pay before he ordered.

The meal cost $3.30.

Verne E. Bjorkland, 56, of 3134 Mars, was fined $350 in traffic court by Judge E. F. M. Robinson for impaired driving.

Joseph Butcher, 52, of 527 Trutch, was jailed 14 days by Robinson for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for six months except on work.

He was prohibited from driving for two months.

Gladys Dora Hamilton, 44, of 1042 Dunsford, was fined $150 for impaired driving and banned from driving for six months.

Eric Bibby, 516 Yates, was fined $300 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for four months except when working.

Grenades Hurled

NAZARETH, Israel (Reuter) — Three grenade explosions, apparently set off by a distraught head of household, shattered a bar mitzvah celebration at a village near here Sunday night, killing five members of a family and injuring 13, police said Mordechai Ben David Stwissa, 36, hurled the grenades into his wife's family home after she refused to return to him with their two children. The wife, Rachel Sawissa, 26, escaped unhurt.

Almost a meal in itself

RCMP CHARGE MAN IN PICKET SHOOTING

MACKENZIE, B.C. (CP) — Henry Stolber, 24, of Mackenzie was charged Tuesday with possession of a firearm for purposes dangerous to the public peace. He was arrested by RCMP following a shooting incident Saturday at a picket line of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill workers.

Genet Balanc Challenge

MONTREAL (CP) — Every human carri a small number of potentially harmful gene in his or her cells, and is the awesome task of genetic counselling clinic to determine the chanes that pairing of such genes whill produce afflicted children.

The risk, of sourse, are mote, but the fact remins that about five of ever 100 babies born have some genetic defect. Resulting diseases account for one childhood death in five, compared with one in 50 cause by infectious disease.

The McGill University-Montreal Children's Hospital genetic counselling and treatment centre has been included in a continental networ of 10 centres organized last yar by the National Foundatin for Genetics and Neuromuscular Diseases.

To date, said Dr. F. Clarke Fraser, human genetis professor at McGill, and Dr. Charles R. Scriver, a specialist in human biochemical genetics, there isn't much medical science can do for children born with genetic conditions such as mongolism, dwarfism or club feet.

The clinic, however, des up to 100 cases a year and provides a consultation serice as well.

COME FOR COUNSEL

"People usually com to us for counselling when they've had one defective chil and are wondering about their chances for another, or when they are planning marriage and know of, or suspect some inherited defect or disease in the family background," Dr. Fraser said in an interview.

Some defects can be detected by examining the patients' cells. Others such as the late-developing disease, Huntington's chorea must be determined by family history.

"It is rarely possible to go back more than two generations or to get very accurate information, but this is often enough with many diseases to predict the odds fairly accurately."

Dr. Fraser then advises the couple of the chances of a defective child "as we consider anything over a 10-per-cent chance a grav risk."

Some people, however, are under the mistaken impression that if they have one affected child, the other three will be normal.

In fact, Dr. Fraser said, it is possible for the couple to have four affected children, although this is unlikely.

NEEDLE IS USED

"Of all the people I've counselled," he adds, "some chose not to have children at all, many chose to adopt, some chose to gamble, usually where the risk was low. But none ever wanted artificial insemination."

If the couple decide to go ahead and have children, a procedure known as amniocentesis can detect some conditions. A needle is inserted in the mother's abdomen to withdraw some of the amniotic fluid in which the baby is floating.

Cells in the fluid are then tested for a limited number of conditions.

"You can detect and treat by transfusion Rh babies this way," Dr. Fraser said.

Asked about the effectiveness of genetic counselling, he said a British report "showed that 70 per cent of those with a risk of more than 10 per cent did not have children."

"In my experience, many people with hemophilia, PKU (a type of mental retardation) and things of that nature asked to be sterilized and then adopted their children."

GRADE EVEN UNLUCKY THIS YEAR

Disappointments in store for Greater Victoria Grade 7 pupils.

School will end for them on Monday, June 21 and not on Friday of the week as announced earlier by the department of education.

They will be dismissed June 22, but will return to school for report cards June 24.

Grades 8 and 9 will finish Friday, but grades 1 to 6 will attend classes up to and including June 25.

Heath Going Full Steam Ahead in Water-Logged Ship of State

By JOHN LeBLANC

LONDON (CP) — Edward Heath, Britain's seafaring prime minister, is sailing with an unchanged course in this last week of a worrying first year in office.

Conservative Heath, who upset the governing Labor party June 18, 1970, has plunged into rough seas. But he refuses to shift direction according to the winds of politics in line with his campaign declaration that the Tory program is meant to take hold during the life of a full Parliament.

Some observers are predicting that, if Conservative electoral support keeps fading away at its current rate, he could find himself back at the polls earlier than this.

HEATH

favor. They lost a Commons seat recently to Labor, reducing their majority to 28, and took a bad beating in bellwether local elections around the country.

A major reason for the end of the honeymoon is that the government has failed to halt what it called in pre-election days "roaring inflation," which has in fact stepped up its pace.

SPLIT OVER MARKET

Another is that there is a wide split in the country—and among the Tories themselves—over Heath's determination to carry Britain into the European Common Market. Polls indicate that 60 per cent of the public is against entry.

Then the union vote has been alienated sharply by at least two things:

1. Legislation to overhaul Britain's industrial relations law which would involve putting curbs on wildcat strikes and making unions subject to stiff fines for certain breaches. The powerful Trades Union Congress is implacably opposed to it and has advised members to take steps to make it unworkable.

2. A determination to hold down large-scale wage increases, which the government regards as the root of the inflation that has sent consumer prices up nine per cent in its first year—compared with six per cent in the year before it took office.

To make this stick, the government has gone through two strikes with its own electricity and postal workers and has been putting heat on the nationalized industries to hold the line.

The government also has lost goodwill among some groups by employment and other signs of such policies as reinstituting limited sales of arms to apartheid South Africa—banned by its Labor predecessor—and bringing in immigration legislation which some feel is weighted against colored Commonwealth residents.

Meanwhile unemployment has been rising at the government waits for "reflationary" tax easements in its budget of last spring to encourage industrial expansion. So far they have not done this.

To cap it all, Rolls-Royce, a trademark of British industrial perfection, went staggering into insolvency and caused the government to sidetrack its avowed policy of no help to "lame ducks" to bail it out.

But when another of these recurrent crises developed this week the government refused to hand over money to maintain the solvency of Upper Clyde Shipbuilders, the country's biggest shipyard group. Instead, it was to help in reorganization.

While juggling with such immediate problems and a thorny issue of settling a timetable for a parliamentary attempt to get Britain into Europe, the government also appeared faced with the basic questions of deciding whether the time has arrived for more general action to check the inflation, growing unemployment and other signs of

BANK DROPS AHINT

It received a hint from the Bank of England only last week that some form o fdirect wage control to contain prices may be in order, though Heath came down against this in pre-election statements and it proved unworkable when Labor tried it out in conjunction with price controls in the late 1960s.

While 54-year-old Heath publicly played it cool on the big issues, he got a front-page hammering this week from the mass-circulation Sun newspaper, which devoted most of the page to a story blazoned: "Come Ashore, Skipper."

In reference to Heath's fondness for racing weekends on his £20,000 yacht Morning Cloud, the paper said:

"As his yacht pulls away from the shore and the economy of the United Kingdom sinks slowly in the west, Skipper Ted sits bronzed and beaming at the helm.

"Behind him there is a mounting crisis. Prices soar out of control. There is grave unemployment, galloping inflation and industrial stagnation.

Party Chairman Peter Thomas, in a statement on the Conservatives' record, advises the British to withhold judgment on the government until it sees the effect of last spring's tax cuts and of many industrial decisions waiting upon Britain's negotiations for entry into Europe.

This European issue has put Britain at an historic turning point. Not only has the question of benefits versus disadvantages torn the country into two camps, but the two major political parties are divided within themselves.

It has also caused misgivings among Britain's Commonwealth partners, and much of the negotiating has been aimed at getting guarantees for the future of such commodities as West Indian sugar and New Zealand butter now dependent on the British market.

Heath has been determined to bring Britain into Europe ever since, as a cabinet minister in 1962, he opened then-abortive negotiations. He promised a new try during the 1970 campaign.

Now most hurdles seem to have been surmounted, including parliamentary passage, according to a poll of MPs taken this week. Hardest to convince may be the public, which wonders whether economic benefits will come along fast enough to outweigh what will be still higher eventual consumer costs as the result of the link.

Why belts?

Why are more and more motorists paying the extra money for belted tires?
Because belted tires give longer mileage. There are two special belts designed to hold the tread firmly and prevent side-to-side "squirm". By preventing this scrubbing action, those belts prolong the life of the tread. And they also give you more protection from potholes and other road hazards.
Just one more thing about belted tires. It's the construction that makes the belted difference... not the cord material that goes into the belts.

Why Firestone?

Our belted tires have something special; Triple-Strength Construction. So we can give you a really exceptional GUARANTEE FOR THE LIFE OF THE TREAD. No gimmicks. No mileage limit. No time limit.
Allowances are based on the percentage of tread left on the tire. 100% of tread life occurs when the tread is worn down to the "wear bars". (The Federal Government says all tires must have wear bars to show when the tread is no longer safe.)
Your tire will be replaced FREE within the first 20% of tread life if a defect in workmanship or materials means that the tire must be taken off your car.
At 25% of wear, you pay one quarter of the replacement price. And so on.
And remember this, 60,000 Firestone Stores and Dealers all over North America stand behind your guarantee. No matter where you buy your Firestone tires.
This outstanding guarantee is a good reason to choose Firestone.
The fact that you'll probably never need it is an even better reason.

Why now?

Because right now you'll really start piling on the miles.
On hot highways. Busy highways. Deserted sideroads. If a tire fails it can be mighty inconvenient. Or you may not be that lucky. So bring your car in today to Firestone for a free tire safety inspection.
Here's another reason why right now is the right time to put your car on safe new tires. The deals are really SunSational at Firestone. Especially on our Double Belted Strato-Streak. But we've got all kinds of deals on all kinds of tires for all kinds of cars. Right now.

A Day of Learning Down to Earth

By DONNA CLEMENTS

DUNCAN — Cowichan School District students are able to go for nature walks and study the past, present and future of the logging industry all in a school day.

"This makes their studies a reality and much more meaningful than just reading about them in books," says director of elementary instruction Bob Moss.

Moss considers the Cowichan school district one of the most fortunate in the province because it has facilities like the Cowichan Valley forest museum and the Eaves Park outdoor study centre at its disposal.

The forest museum, which is 40 acres of logging exhibits and wooded areas situated about one mile north of Duncan, has worked out a program with the school district where classes are given special guided tours and discussions.

Since the seventh annual opening of the museum on May 15 over 1,500 elementary school students from Cowichan and other districts have participated in the program. Another 1,000 have toured the museum on their own time.

Museum supervisor Pat Phillips said several classes are scheduled daily until school closes at the month's end. Alison Mayer of Duncan works full-time with these school children.

School district and museum officials are finding the program successful in its first year of operation. Although it is aimed at the third and fourth year level, students from the one to five year levels take part in the tours.

The program consists of three phases — a train ride, indoor and outdoor tours and discussions on all aspects of the museum.

This park, which is under the jurisdiction of Cowichan school district, was willed to the province for educational purposes by Janet Goodall in 1962.

Since that time the school district has set up nature trails, converted an old barn into an outdoor classroom and is replacing the caretaker's residence with a new and more appropriate one, Moss said.

IT'S THREE YEARS OLD and so small. But someday it's going to be a giant. Pat Phillips introduces a seedling fir to Coreen Wuskynyk, 5, Shirley Pilcher, 9, Donald Snelling, 8, all of Crofton.

B.C. Tel Reasons For Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — If B.C. Telephone Co. is denied approva of its application to increase rates, it will enter into a cycle in which lack of confidence in the company's securities will worsen its financial position and thus increase further the distrust of investors, a Canadian Transport Commission Committee was told Tuesday.

J. B. Pitblado, vice-president of Harris and Partners, the Toronto investment dealers, was giving evidence on behalf of the company on the eighth day of a public hearing into B.C. Tel's rate application.

Mr. Pitblado said that in 1970 the company's interest coverage—the ratio by which pre-tax earnings exceed debt servicing charges—dropped to an all-time low of 3.04 to one. He forecast a further decline in coverage to 2.59 to one by the year end unless rate relief is forthcoming.

Such a continued drop would, he warned, make investors wary, in turn making it more expensive and more difficult for the company to raise money on the market.

Higher charges on the money that is available to the company will weaken still more the interest coverage position. "And so the cycle will continue until the company will meet with extreme difficulty in raising new debt.

"If interest coverage declines to below the trust indenture requirement of a two-to-one ratio then the company will not be able to raise any additional debt at all", he said. (The indenture covers first mortgage bonds and the stipulated minimum ratio is a safeguard for holders these issues.)

At best, the company, if denied a rate increase, will only be able to show a narrow margin of safety in 1972 over the minimum two-to-one ratio demanded by the trust deed, he said. "This, following on a deteriorating trend in coverage, will raise serious concern in the minds of investors."

Mr. Pitblado said that between 1965 and 1970 the company's total interest expense rose by $9.3 million to nearly $18 million. Some $2 million of the increase was due to higher levels of interest rates.

Between now and the end of 1975 B.C. Tel plans to spend $680 million on extending and modernizing its system. He said that in view of the company's cash needs it is vital that it regain an acceptable interest coverage position and thought a coverage ratio of three-to-one as the minimum which would be judged acceptable by investors.

"At some point the sheer magnitude of the company's external capital requirements may force it to seek funds in the U.S. market. This can only be done if the interest coverage and other ratios are relatively competitive in that market."

IMPROVE PICTURE

J. C. Carlile, vice-president of finance with B.C. Tel, said that he had been advised by reputable Canadian investment houses that, "it's no use your coming peddling your bonds till you have improved your coverage."

Mr. Pitblado said that his stated minimum desirable ratio for interest coverage of three-to-one is below what many authorities judge proper.

Dealing with the balance between revenues and operating costs, Mr. Pitblado said that the former between 1966 and 1969 grew at a compound rate of 11.5 per cent and thus maintained a slight lead over mounting costs, which increased at the rate of 11 per cent a year.

Because of the favorable lead net earnings during this period grew at a rate of just under 13 per cent. Additional share issues diluted this return and average share growth was seven per cent.

But in 1970 cost increases overtook revenue gains and this, together with higher interest rates and an increase in total indebtedness, caused earnings per share to fall from $5.28 to $5.10, a decline of 3.4 per cent.

The company, said Mr. Pitblado, thought share earnings would fall a further 8.6 per cent in 1972 unless a rate increase is granted. He thought this forecast dubious because it presumed that increases in interest charges could be held to 18.4 per cent.

His own view, he said, was that without the improvement in revenue afforded by a rate increase, the company would find it impossible to raise money at anything like the rate if was assuming, providing, that is, that it could raise any money at all.

Mr. Pitblado said that in the past the company has been able itself to finance about half its capital needs. But this position will change and as the capital requirement grows B.C. Tel will become increasingly reliant on outside sources of funds.

This year and next it will need to raise $124 million in external capital, which is nearly half of the capital it took in during the 10 years up to 1970.

INSIDE PAKISTAN: The Revenge of a Regime

'PUNITIVE ACTION' DEVASTATES ENTIRE VILLAGES

(Mascarenhas is a Goan who was until recently a correspondent for the Dacca Morning News, a member of a newspaper group under Pakistani government control. He wrote the following article for the London Sunday Times following a 10-day tour of the East Bengal countryside with an army escort; it was filed from outside Pakistan, and is reprinted by permission.)

By ANDY MASCARENHAS
Washington Post

It was Friday the 16th, not quite Black Friday, but still unlucky enough for Abdul Bari. Like thousands of people in East Bengal, he had made the mistake of running within the sight of a West Pakistani army patrol.

Now he was about to be shot.

"Normally we would have killed him as he ran," I was chattily informed by Maj. Rathore, the paunchy operations officer of the 9th Division, as we stood on the outskirts of a tiny village near Mudafarganj, about 20 miles south of Comilla. "But we are checking him out for your sake. You are new here and I see you have a squeamish stomach."

WHY KILL?

"Why kill him?" I asked with mounting concern.

"Because he might be a Hindu or he might be a rebel, perhaps a student or an Awami leaguer. They know we are sorting them out, and they betray themselves by running."

"But why are you killing them? And why pick on the Hindus?" I persisted.

"Must I remind you," Rathore said rather severely, "how they have tried to destroy Pakistan? Now with the cover of the fighting we have an excellent opportunity of finishing them off."

"Of course," he added hastily, "we are only killing the Hindu men. We are soldiers, not cowards like the rebels. They kill our women and children."

I was getting my first glimpse of the campaign of genocide that has spread a red stain of blood over the otherwise verdant land of East Bengal. First it was the massacre of the non-Bengalis in a savage outburst of Bengali hatred. Now it was deliberate genocide, carried out by the West Pakistan army.

The pogrom's victims are not only the Hindus of East Bengal—who constitute about 12 per cent of the 70 million population — but also thousands of Bengali Moslems. These include university and college students, teachers, Awami League and left-wing political cadres and everyone the army can catch of the 176,000 Bengali soldiers and police who mutinied on March 26 in a spectacular, though untimely and ill-starred bid to create the independent republic of Bangla Desh.

INCREDIBLE

What I saw and heard with unbelieving eyes and ears during my 10 days in East Bengal during April made it terribly clear that the killings are not the isolated acts of military commanders in the field. They are the result of deliberate, vengeful orders from the top.

Unnerved by the almost successful breakaway of the province, which has more than half the country's population, Gen. Yahya Khan's military government is engaged in its own "final solution" of the East Bengal problem.

We had been racing against the setting sun after a visit to Chandpur (the West Pakistan army prudently stays indoors at night in East Bengal) when one of the jawans (privates) crouched in the back of the land cruiser called out sharply: "There's a man running, sahib."

Maj. Rathore brought the vehicle to an abrupt halt, simultaneously reaching for the Chinese-made light machine gun propped against the door. Less than 200 yards away a man could be seen loping through the knee-high paddy. Rathmore fired a warning burst.

DRAG HIM

As the man sank to a crouch in the lush carpet of green, two jawans were already on their way to drag him in.

The thud of a rifle butt across the shoulders preceded the questioning.

"Who are you?"

"Mercy, sahib. My name is Abdul Bari. I'm a tailor from the New Market in Dacca."

"Don't lie to me. You're a Hindu. Why were you running?"

"It's almost curfew time, sahib, and I was going to my village."

"Tell me the truth. Why were you running?"

Before the man could answer he was quickly frisked for weapons by a jawan while another quickly snatched away his lungi (a wraparound skirt). The skinny body that was bared revealed the distinctive traces of circumcision, which is obligatory for Moslems. At least it could be plainly seen that he was not a Hindu.

Abdul Bari was clouted several times with the butt end of a rifle, then ominously pushed against a wall. Mercifully his screams brought a bearded old man out of a nearby hut. Rathore pounced on him.

"Do you know this man?"

"Yes, sahib. He is Abdul Bari."

"Is he a fauji (rebel soldier)?"

"Tell me the truth."

There was a sudden silence. Rathore looked abashed as I said, "for God's sake, let him go. What more proof do you want of his innocence?"

UNCONVINCED

But the jawans were apparently unconvinced and kept milling around Bari. It was only after I had once more interceded on his behalf that Rathore ordered Bari to be released. By that time he was a crumpled, speechless heap of terror. But his life had been saved.

Others have not been as fortunate. Driving through the country-side one could see bodies of both Hindus and Moslems twisted grotesquely beside the charred remains of the huts and between the coconut palms.

For six spine-chilling days as I travelled with the officers of the 9th Division headquarters at Comilla, I witnessed at close quarters the terrifying extent of the genocide. I saw Hindus, hunted from village to village and door to door, shot off-hand after a cursory "short-arm inspection" showed they were uncircumcised.

I have heard the screams of men bludgeoned to death in the compound of the circuit house (civil administrative headquarters) in Comilla. I have seen truckloads of other human targets and those who had the humanity to try to help them hauled off "for disposal" under the cover of darkness and curfew. I have witnessed the screaming brutality of "kill-and-burn missions" as the army units, after clearing out the rebels, relentlessly pursued the pogrom in the towns and the villages.

And in the officers' mess at night I have listened incredulously as otherwise brave and honorable men proudly talked over the day's kill — "how many did you get?"

TOO LATE

All this is being done, as any West Pakistani officer will tell you, for the "preservation of the unity, the integrity and the ideology of Pakistan." It is, of course, too late for that. The very military action that is designed to hold together the two wings of the country, separated by a thousand miles of India, has confirmed the ideological and emotional break. East Bengal can only be kept in Pakistan by the heavy hand of the Punjab-dominated army.

The bone-crushing military operation has two distinctive features. One is what the authorities like to call the "cleansing process" — a euphemism for genocide. The other is the "rehabilitation effort." This again is another way of describing the blatant moves to turn East Bengal into a docile colony of West Pakistan. These commonly used expressions and the repeated official references to "miscreants" and "infiltrators" are part of the charade which is being enacted for the benefit of the world. Strip away the propaganda, and the reality is colonization — and killing.

The justification for the annihilation of the Hindus was paraphrased by Lt.-Gen. Tikka Khan, the military governor of East Pakistan, in a radio broadcast on April 18. He said: "The Moslems of East Pakistan, are determined to keep it alive. However, the voice of the vast majority had been suppressed through coercion, threats to life and property by a vocal, violent and aggressive minority, which forced the Awami league to adopt the destructive course."

Others, speaking privately, were more blunt in seeking justification.

BLED WHITE

"The Hindus had completely undermined the Moslem masses with their money," Col. Naim, of the 9th Division headquarters said. "They bled the province white. Money, foo dand produce flowed across the borders to India. In some cases they made up more than half the teaching staff in the colleges and schools, and sent their own children to be educated in Calcutta. It had reached the point where Bengal culture was in fact Hindu culture, and East Pakistan was virtually under the control of the Marwari businessmen in Calcutta. We have to sort them out to restore the land to the people, and the people to their faith."

Maj. Bashir, who came up from the ranks, boasts of a personal body count of 28. He had his own reasons for what has happened. "This is a war between the pure and the impure," he informed me over a cup of tea.

"The people here may have Moslem names and call themselves Moslems. But they are Hindus at heart. You won't believe that the head of the Cantonment mosque here issued an edict during Friday prayers that the people would attain Janat (paradise) if they killed West Pakistanis. We sorted the bastard out and we are now sorting out the others. Those who are left will be real Muslims. We will even teach them Urdu."

Everywhere I found officers and men fashioning imaginative garments of justification from the arbitrary fabric of their own prejudices. Scapegoats had to be found to legitimize, even for their own consciences, the dreadful Nazi-style solution to what in essence was a political problem: the Bengalis won the election and wanted to rule. The Punjabis, whose ambitions and interests have dominated governmental policies since the founding of Pakistan in 1947, would brook no erosion of their power. And they had the army to back them up.

Officials privately justify what has been done as a retaliation for the massacre of the non-Bengalis before the army moved in. But events suggest that the pogrom was not the result of a snap decision when the Bengali forces mutinied but rather the product of careful planning.

The agony of East Bengal is not over. The army is determined to go on until the "cleanup" is complete.

Two divisions of the Pakistan army, the 9th and the 16th, were flown out from West Pakistan to "sort out" the Bengali rebels and the Hindus. This was a considerable logistical feat for a country of Pakistan's resources. More than 25,000 men were moved from the west to the east. Carrying only bed rolls and battle packs (their equipment was to follow by sea) the troops were flown out to Dacca by PIA, the national airline. Its fleet of seven Boeings was taken off international and domestic routes and flew the long haul via Ceylon continously for 14 days. A few air force transport aircraft helped.

FINISH JOB

The crucial question now is, will the killing stop?

I was given the army's answer by Maj. Gen. Shaukat Raza, commanding officer of the 9th Division, during our first meeting at Comilla on April 16.

"You must be absolutely sure," he said, "that we have not undertaken such a drastic and expensive operation — expensive both in men and money — for nothing. We've undertaken a job. We are going to finish it, not hand it over half done to the politicians so that they can mess it up again. The army can't keep coming back like this every three or four years. It has a more important task. I assure you that when we have got through with what we are doing, there will never be need again for such an operation."

Six little corn flake packages for people who don't need a big one

All the people who enjoy Kellogg's Corn Flakes don't have five children and a large dog. Some live alone. There's spry Mrs. Fletcher who lives in the bungalow on the corner. In the apartment building up the street, there's the pert secretary in 312 and the brash bachelor in 714.

For people like these, Kellogg's makes Handi-Pak*...six little packages of Corn Flakes that are just that. Handier. Kellogg's knows that corn flake lovers don't live by big packages alone.

Consumer Complaints Rise

Complaints from Canadian consumers to "Box 99" — the official repository of the federal consumer affairs department's for "beefs" about retailing — have quadrupled in two years, according to Canadian Grocer business magazine.

It reports an official tabulation of 2,700 complaints plus 200 inquiries in 1970. Of the complaints, 1,600 were from women, 1,100 from men. Ontario led the list with 930, followed by British Columbia (700), Quebec (400), and on down the list.

Fresh meat suffered the most consumer criticism, about equal on quantity and quality — high hamburger fat content, tough steaks and roasts, chuck labeled round.

Dairy products were next on the list. Main complaints included short measure, sour milk, leaky containers, or "foreign bodies." Poultry packing was criticized, too — two or three necks in some, or birds stuffed with hearts and gizzards, or wings passed off as breasts.

Most of the coffee complaints were about "cents-off" price deals.

Advertising came through fairly unscathed — only five

The 60-year-old secretary was British Rail's longest travelling commuter and one of the organization's best customers: She paid $63 a month for the fare. After her last trip, there was a celebration party at the local railway station in Suffolk.

The small billed cap, worn most often with hair tucked in, showed up in crushed velvet patchwork, bunny fur and even fake mink.

A commentator said the hat, popular with young people, was a sure sign of the youthful "boutique" influence in the millinery industry.

There also was a long-billed baseball cap, a wide brimmed fisherman's hat, a Dutch girl's hat done in white mink and even a suede stocking cap edged in mink trim.

The hats were enthusiastically applauded by the audience but one industry representative was dismayed that so few women present were wearing hats.

'Few' Flout Census Law

Six per cent of Victoria's census forms are still on the loose, regional officer Ward Palmer said Tuesday.

Palmer declined to say how the missing forms would be tracked down, but said "census representatives have worn down a lot of shoe leather with call-backs."

He said in some cases the householder said the form had been mailed, but hadn't arrived at the census office.

"Most of our protests came in before census day," Palmer said. "Once the forms had arrived, 99 per cent of the calls were from people who didn't get forms, or didn't understand the questions."

Palmer said a lot of those who complained to the census representative on their doorstep had calmed down by the time they contacted someone higher in the division.

"Most people are law abiding," he said.

He said he'd "rather not dwell" on the "few" who refused to fill in any or seetions of the census form, but said that in Victoria the number was low.

"At the local level we only check that the questions are answered, we don't question the accuracy of the answers," he said. "All we can do about an outright refusal is report it to our superiors."

Under section 35 of the Statistics Act passed in 1948, the penalty for refusing to give census information or wilfully giving false information is a fine not exceeding $100, imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, or both.

"If people don't like it they should remember the law was made by their elected representatives," said Palmer.

He said he felt that "every one of the 400-odd people who took on the job of census representative was doing a fine job. For some it was easy; at other places, they gave the representatives a hard time."

SEW SIMPLE

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I would like to make some men's ties but can't find the heavier materials for the wide ties. Is the new Qiana the right weight? It would be nice to use since it is water repellent. — Mrs. E.G.D.

Dear Mrs. E.G.D.:

There is almost no limit to the fabric that can be used for men's ties. I have shopped the market rather thoroughly and found wool challis, Italian silk, cottons, seersuckers, printed and solid polyester woven fabrics, as well as pure silk prints and Qiana.

The weight of the fabric you use must be offset by the amount of interlining you use. For a lightweight silk, you must use two or three layers of interlining so the tie will knot nicely. A heavier fabric to begin with would require only one layer of interlining. Qiana is the brand name of a nylon and comes in all types of finishes as well as all weights. You can make any tie water-resistant by spraying it with water-repellent fabric finish when the tie has been completed. You can add many wearings to the tie by treating it in this way.

From the letters I receive from you readers, I think most men are more than enthusiastic about the ties you gals have been making for them. Besides, it's kind of a nice way to say "thank you" for all the fabrics they let you buy for yourselves.

Clothing Blamed

TORONTO (CP)—Nine of 10 children admitted to hospital with burns have suffered them because of inflammable clothing, a doctor at the Hospital for Sick Children says. Plastic surgeon Dr. John Birch, reporting on a hospital survey of burn cases in the Ontario Medical Association's publication Review, said one-quarter of the children had their clothing set on fire by a match or cigarette lighter. Most of the burned children were wearing cotton, nylon or wool.

Learning in Hospital Is 'Special Problem'

CALGARY (CP) — Anxiety and fear are byproducts of illness, so education of children in hospital must be creatively designed, says Emma Plank, an expert on child education.

The director of the child life education program at the Cleveland, Ohio, Metropolitan Hospital told a seminar at the Foothills Hospital here that the state of mind of children in hospital is not conducive to learning.

"School activities in hospital have to be imaginative and challenging and not just a continuation of assignments from the home school," she said. Regular school assignments often don't fit into the world of a sick child.

"Seen from the child's point of view, learning takes on a different character during illness and especially during hospitalization."

Mrs. Plank said anxiety is one of the unavoidable byproducts of illness, and children set up defence networks to protect themselves.

MUST BE MODIFIED

"It is hard to concentrate on a given or chosen task while preoccupied with fears about oneself; therefore the tools and task of learning have to be modified and completely individualized."

She described how a young polio patient with an interest in science was given some of his tuition in a hospital laboratory to meet his needs.

In some instances, the educational program can provide a means of teaching the child about his illness, she said.

She recalled how a diabetic had refused to participate in needle sterilization and practice injections for her nurse. But the girl was pleased to show off her superior knowledge for her school class.

As well, learning while in hospital helps keep the child reassured that his thinking powers are not damaged by his illness, she said.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is my second marriage. It's my wife's second marriage also and we both feel that we are perfect for each other. However, the weakness which ruined my first marriage is now cropping up again.

I am hooked on prostitutes. I don't know why. I started going to these women when I was very young, and even though my first wife lacked nothing along that line, I couldn't stay away from prostitutes, so after 12 years of marriage, we broke up.

I am now almost 40, and in the last year I have been married to my present wife I haven't gone to a prostitute once, but I keep thinking about it more and more. This is a rather small town and there are none here, but I know some in a city about 120 miles away, and I keep trying to figure out a way to get there without my wife's knowing it. Don't suggest a head doctor. There is only one in this town and he isn't very well thought of, so I rejected that idea.

I am a government employee and well paid. Can you help me?—Weak and Tempted.

DEAR WEAK: Your "weakness" can be overcome, but you rejected the only possible cure for it. A "head doctor." I'll not suggest seeing one in the larger city, because the temptation there could be too much for you to resist. If you sincerely want to be cured of your problem, you will see the doctor in your town. And if you don't want to be cured, admit it like a man and quit kidding yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "One of the reasons the marriage contract should be considered invalid is because it was made while both parties were insane"?—Alamoso, Colo.

DEAR ALAMOSO: I did. But it has been said by others in many different ways. This is not to put down those in love, but there is a touch of "insanity" in that which gladdens, saddens, maddens, inspires, depresses, exhilarates, tortures and enslaves. And that's what love is all about.

DEAR ABBY: That letter from Often Asked, who resented casual acquaintances asking her where she bought various items of wearing apparel, reminded me of a woman here in town. She was always very smartly attired in the height of fashion, so naturally she was frequently asked by friends and casual acquaintances, "Wherever did you find that?" She was a sly one. She either "picked it up" in Portugal or Rome. Or it was a "gift." — Her Silent Friend.

Peeling Pays Better Than College Degree

"I send part of my income to my attorney who buys stocks and invests in a mutual fund for me," she says. "I expect to have a nice sum when I retire in about 10 years. Then I can teach school or something.

"I look at my act strictly as a business and I keep my private life completely separate. I never date anyone I meet at places I work. I like what I'm doing, I like to travel and the money is good—much better than I could make teaching."

She appeared at the Tiger's Den club here after a South American tour. From Tampa she went to Macon, Ga., and is planning a trip to Alaska in the summer for the third year in succession. After that she is booked to appear in the warmer climate of Hawaii.

At his office in Miami, Roland Muse, ex-vaudeville performer turned booking agent, says: "I book only clean, high class places with class girls. First class only. I wish I had the good girls to send. I can't get enough."

He claims that "business is booming."

She came into the business while at college in Baltimore. She worked part time as a cocktail waitress in a club. "The boss needed a burlesque dancer and I thought I could do that. I did okay and began to earn a lot more money, so I quit college."

"I vary my act. In Miami I would strip all the way into the nude," she said. "In other places I might go topless. Here I wear pasties and a G-string. The law enforces things differently in different places."

ALBERTA GAME FARM HAS BABIES GALORE

"It was a busy season," said Mrs. Al Oeming, wife of the director. "This is about the largest number of African babies born in a year, many of which are quite rare in captivity."

The African babies began arriving in April, earlier than the North American young, she said. Many breeds have been several years on the farm and have adapted readily to the Alberta winters.

Mrs. Oeming said some of those born on the farm include four yaks, some descendants of the black-and-white royal yak bull of the Dalai Lama's herd in Tibet; three Pere David deer of which there are only 300 in the world; one hartebeest; one demara zebra; three wood bison; eight prairie bison; one waterbuck (African antelope); two dama gazelle; four llamas; two Japanese sika deer; three Formosan sika deer; three wallabies; one porcupine, and several wolf pups.

The Oemings did not want to disturb the wolf den, so they still haven't an accurate count of the wolf pups.

As well as those born on the farm, several others were shipped in this spring, Mrs. Oeming said. These included two pygmy hippopotamuses from Liberia and four Siga antelope from Russia.

The hearing aid act that becomes law on July 1 is a big step forward says Mrs. W. E. Rolls, president of the British Columbia Consumers Association and recently named a director on the national CAC board. It is also a "feather in the cap" of minister - without-portolio Isabel Dawson.

The CAC, at both provincial and national levels, has been working for further protection in the hearing aid field since 1968. Mrs. Dawson became interested and started research into the matter in the same year.

"We presented a brief to the provincial government in 1969," Mrs. Rolls says, "and we went back again in 1970. You can understand then how pleased we are to see this act proclaimed."

Talking to her yesterday, I learned that so far as the CAC is concerned the main areas of complaint centred around the high cost of hearing aids, high-pressure salesmanship, door-to-door salesmen, poor dealer service, cost of batteries, lack of knowledge on the part of a purchaser and the incorrect information that a purchaser sometimes received.

* * *

These points were all well documented and explained in a national submission to the department of consumer and corporate affairs back in 1968, and also in briefs presented to the provincial government here.

One of the most important points brought out was that an aid "is just an aid and not a correction as are spectacles, and is a much more complex matter involving electronics and acoustics."

It was also shown that in the fitting of aids, the big problem stemmed from the minds of the buying public. In otherwords, people don't mind admitting to poor eyesight and wearing glasses, but poor hearing is a fact that must be concealed, along with the hearing aid.

Maximum and minimum prices paid for hearing aids were placed in the briefs as anywhere between $100 and $800 plus.

These prices definitely worked hardship on those in low income or unemployed brackets, on the retired and on the parents of hard-of-hearing children where several aids are necessary during the growth period.

* * *

Door-to-door salesmen who infiltrate a district from time to time, the "fly-by-nights with little training," have added to the hardships because there has been no follow-up service and no parts available through them.

They use high-pressure tactics, make wild promises and they have been known "to occasionally sell used aids for new."

The new act, Mrs. Rolls believes, will eliminate many of these problems. To substantiate this statement she points to provisions for the education and licencing of hearing aid dealers and consultants, the types of services for which they may be licenced and the prohibitings of certain activities with the penalties clearly set out.

She is very enthusiastic over the fact that through provisions of the act, it is expected a mobile clinic will be organized to take hearing aid services to outlying districts. "In these districts many live who need hearing aids and yet find it hard to get into the downtown areas where established dealers are located."

* * *

In giving Mrs. Dawson credit for her persistence and determination to bring adequate protection into hearing aid regulations Mrs. Rolls points to the fact that as far as she knows, there is no comprehensive legislation in any other province in Canada. "That could be an added feather in Mrs. Dawson's cap."

The provincial CAC leader believes that Victoria's established hearing aid dealers who are reliable and trustworthy will be as pleased with the new act as the CAC.

"We are all very hopeful that this act will result in prompt and positive action which will help the people of British Columbia to obtain at a fair and reasonable price, the assistance needed to unlock the door of deafness which so often separates them from normal social contacts."

BATTLE BEGINS AT HOME

Ecology Call Issued

WINNIPEG (CP) — Homemakers can join the fight against pollution by educating their families and by taking more responsibility for some of their own actions, says Susan Gadd, consumer information specialist for the Manitoba agriculture department.

"For example, let's look at the problem of garbage," she said in a consumers' newsletter. "Every day we receive all kinds of unwanted advertising in the mail. Every time we go to the supermarket we come home with our bags groaning with as much packaging as food products."

She suggested that consumers let food suppliers, store managers and others in the food industry know they don't want superfluous packaging.

But there are other things the consumer can do, she said. These include:

- Purchase returnable bottles when buying soft drinks — and return them.
- Buy a string or cloth shopping bag and transport your groceries and purchases home in that instead of getting all those little brown paper bags that aren't of any use in the home.
- Cut down on use of disposable products such as paper plates and cups, paper towelling and other paper items.
- Plan to re-use plastic and glass containers whenever possible.
- Try to reduce bulk in garbage by flattening boxes, milk cartons and containers and by fitting tin cans inside each other.
- Re-use paper products wherever possible, such as by re-labelling large brown paper envelopes or using blank pieces of paper for scrap paper notes.
- Make a compost heap for peelings, vegetable waste, tea leaves and coffee grounds and reap added benefits of mulch for the garden.

Most of these pollution-fighters are also budget-stretchers, Miss Gadd said.

"Fighting pollution should start in your home. We must stop looking for scapegoats and start a personal cleanup campaign."

EXCHANGE VISIT to Austria will be made by WO2 Arnold G. Kirby of 350 Gorge Road West, one of six cadets in B.C. selected by the Air Cadet League of Canada. WO2 Kirby graduated from the Senior Leaders Course in St. Jean, Que., in 1969.

Ginni Not Haunted By Bridey Murphy

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Ginni Morrow is a contented housewife who says she is not the least bit haunted by Bridey Murphy.

Mrs. Morrow, now 46, created a sensation in the 1950s when, during a series of hypnotic sessions, she was reported to have related the life story of a "Bridey Murphy," born in 1798, in Cork, Ireland; of her marriage to a Brian MacCarthy and subsequent move to Belfast, where she lived until her death at the age of 66.

During the session, conducaed by Morey Bernstein, a Pueblo, Colo., businessman, Mrs. Morrow — as Bridey Murphy — was reported to have spoken in a completely different voice from her own, and Irish brogue; to have told of faraway and long-ago people, places and events, even to have drawn maps and pictures when necessary.

Accounts of the Bridey Murphy experiences used the fictious name of "Ruth Simmons." Eventually it became known that the woman actually was Ginni Tighe, a Pueblo housewife. She was divorced three years ago and recently remarried.

Today, Mrs. Morrow does not claim to be a firm believer in reincarnation, although she does recognize the possibility.

"It is difficult to be objective when you are the subject," she said "even though I know it was all honest and uncontrived."

"I want someone else to prove it to me as I can't think rationally about it," she added.

Mrs. Morrow remembers little from her hypnotic sessions, but she says they were started because she had severe allergies and thought post-hypnotic suggestion might selp.

Mrs. Morrow hasn't been hypnotized since.

When the book about her exoeriences was published in 1956, Mrs. Morrow "didn't want to hear about it or discuss it because I got so much static from non-believers."

Today she views it in an entirely different framework because people are less skeptical about the theory of reincarnation and more interested in discussing its possibilities.

"I now see the possibilities of what good might come from the experiments," she says.

Mrs. Morrow says many people have told her she did a great deal of damage to churches and religions through the experiments, but she doesn't think so.

However, Mrs. Morrow, who was brougst up in a strict Protestant routine feels she is a better person now that she has broadened her perspective.

"The good this experiment might do will be a long time away but I hope it has started people thinking," she said.

Her experiences haven't kept her from leading a normal and happy life. Her youngest daughter, 16-year-old Teri, a pretty high school cheerleader, says she believes in her mother's experinces and finds that most of her friends do too.

"A BUSINESS BUILT ON CUSTOMER CONFIDENCE AND GOOD WILL"

Ottawa Dollar Borrowing Skyrockets

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government borrowed heavily in the financial year to March 31 to cover a budget deficit, provide funds for Crown agencies and buy up a big inflow of U.S. currency.

Those so-called financial requirements—money needed for government programs over and above its revenue from taxes—amounted to $2,437 million in the 1970-71 financial year. The previous year, only $162 million was required.

Figures issued Wednesday in a government accounting ahead of Friday's new budget, showed actual borrowing of $2,860 million exceeded requirements by $423 million to fatten federal bank accounts. in 1969-70, the government borrowed $232 million more than it needed at $394 million.

The heavy borrowing in 1970-71 reflected a shift in government policy last year towards attempts to stimulate business activity and employment after trying to dampen activity to fight price inflation.

Federal spending on goods and services and its borrowing practices have a major influence on the economy. By keeping its spending close to its income, as in 1969-70, the government aimed to slow down the economy. Its switch to deficit financing has the opposite aim.

BOUGHT U.S. DOLLARS

However, more than half the extra money needed in the latest year—$1,255 million—was required for another purpose. It was used to buy up an excessive inflow of U.S. currency.

That action was judged necessary to keep the value of the Canadian dollar from rising even higher than it did—virtually equal to the U.S. dollar at times—on international currency exchanges.

Excess U.S. currency flowed into Canada, especially early last year, to pay for booming exports of Canadian goods, to make promising investments and in speculation that a profit was to be made by buying the Canadian dollar as it rose in value.

Foreign currency coming into Canada to pay for goods or finance developments has to be changed into Canadian funds. If there is more foreign money coming in than Canadians are spending abroad, the federal government has to buy up the excess through its exchange-fund account.

The money needed for foreign-exchange purposes was more than triple the $347 million required tse year before.

The government also had to raise $418 million to coer a budget deficit as departmental spending of $13,187 million exceeded budget income from taxes and other revenue of $12,769 million. The previous year there was a surplus in that account of $393 million.

DOT Man Takes Big Job In Nepal

By FRANK GRAY

MONTREAL (CP) — The department of transport loses a top representative this summer as Henri Gourdeau takes on an assignment in Nepal for the Asian Development Bank.

But for Mr. Gourdeau, granted a leave of absence as Canada's chief delegate to the International Civil Aviation Organization, the Nepal assignment will give him a chance to do what he likes best—hewing out new airports in rough terrain.

Specifically, Mr. Gourdeau, 50, a long-time public servant with the transport department, will co-ordinate the development of five modern airports between the Nepalese aviation department and the Royal Nepal Airlines Corp.

He also will act as a liaison between Nepalese officials and the Asian Development Bank to assure best use of a $6.2 million loan to develop the aviation system.

The transport department has named Pierre Joubert as his successor at the Montreal-based ICAO, chief legal body for world aviation.

In an interview, Mr. Gourdeau said his chief objective will be to modernize the airport at Katmandu, capital of the small country of plateaus and valleys in the Himalayan foothills.

His tour of duty, to last more than two years, begins in July following the ICAO's 120-nation general assembly in Vienna. He is to be accompanied by his wife and five of his eight children.

"Nepal has five valleys and the objective is to build a modern airport in each of the valleys," he said. "The biggest one will be at Katmandu and it will have a 10,000-foot runway to handle the biggest jet aircraft—including the 747.

"The other airstrips will be built to handle smaller jets and the old prop-driven airplanes like the DC-4. This means that runways of 7,000 feet will be enough."

The airstrips would serve two purposes. They would allow the country, which operates at a subsistence level, to exploit better its natural resources, and would also serve to attract tourists.

The project also calls for the development later of a STOL — short-takeoff-and-landing—system, by which transport planes needing little runway space could hop, skip and jump about the country to transport goods to remote areas.

BUY TWIN OTTERS

Mr. Gourdeau noted that the department of industry, trade and commerce has made an interest-free loan with which the kingdom is to purchase two Twin Otter STOL-type aircraft built by de Havilland of Toronto.

Commenting on Canada's potential in assuming leadership in developing STOL aircraft and systems, he said:

"If we established a good system of STOL at a low cost, such as in Nepal, then Canada would have a finished showpiece program to show other interested countries."

He said he would prefer that the government support the as-yet-embryonic STOL industry through foreign aid by which recipient countries would be required to purchase Canadian aviation equipment.

Government subsidization of the industry would lead to "inefficiency," he said.

Mr. Gourdeau said that when bank officials approached him and "asked if I minded taking an assignment in such primitive surroundings, I said that Nepal's aviation facilities didn't look too much different from Canada's a few short years ago."

He recalled that he helped develop a network of municipal airports in remote communities in northern Quebec and along the north and south shores near the mouth of the St. Lawrence River, when he was regional director of civil aviation for the Quebec region for the transport department in the early 1950s.

He also helped develop facilities at Montreal's Dorval airport, in Newfoundland and on Baffin Island.

Mr. Gourdeau's career in aviation began during the Second World War when he served as a pilot in the RCAF Alouette squadron.

CENTRALIA, Wash.—Police here questioned a man Tuesday who said he had travelled across the United States by getting tows for a broken-down car that can't be driven. Police said the man told them he was on his way to Mexico to do missionary work but first wanted to attend a revival meeting in Tacoma. Thanks to a long series of tows, he said, he had travelled from Pennsylvania through the midwest and up to Washington. A few hours later, the police said they checked to see if the man was still around. He wasn't and neither was the inoperablee car.

CARDINAL CODY . . . censured

CHICAGO — The Association of Chicago priests voted 144 to 126 Tuesday night to censure John Cardinal Cody, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Chicago, for allegedly failing to speak out on behalf of the needs of priests. The ACP, representing 900 of the 2,400 priests in the Chicago archdiocese, also voted to centure five auxiliary bishops who, with Cardinal Cody, attended the meeting in April of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. The agenda for the bishops' meeting, held in Detroit, included hearing results of a sociological survey which reported a majority of the American priests favored optional celibacy. But the 25 bishops at the meeting did not discuss the question.

Whether homosexual behavior was a cause of drug use or a result isn't determined in the study.

TORONTO — What causes a man to put a large red cross on the top of his house? In Frank Tucker's case it was a desperate bid to keep student pilots from flying planes over his house near the Buttonville airport north of the city. He said in an interview Tuesday he believes his white house is being used as a reference point for student pilots landing at the airport about 400 yards away. As many as 100 planes an hour pass over the house. Tucker hopes the red cross, symbol for a hospital, will keep the planes away.

Petition Seeks Reversal Of Discharge Decision

Three hundred and seven people have signed a petition asking the provincial government to reconsider the Pollution Control Branch's refusal of a discharge permit for a mine near Jordan River.

Mrs. Louise Iverson, wife of a former employee at Sunro Mine, said Tuesday that about half the signatures are those of former Sunro employees, their wives and from companies that had been doing business with the mine or would be if it went into production.

The Pollution Control Board will hear the appeal of Dison Development Ltd., the firm managing the mine, against the decision of the Pollution Control Branch at a hearing scheduled for June 29.

NINE OBJECTORS

It will open at 10 a.m. in Room 104 of the provincial museum. Nine parties have qualified as objectors. Among those who earlier fought the application were Jordan River residents, conservationists and commercial fishermen.

The mine had proposed discharging up to a million gallons of mine tailings daily into Juan de Fuca Strait from a pipe just below low tide line.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Iverson said miners who had earlier claimed the area would lose $6 million business anually through goods and services not purchased if the mine was blocked now agree that figure is inaccurate.

In general terms, they claim the loss would more likely be between $3 million and $4 million, she said.

OLD WEST COAST SCHOOL TO CLOSE

TOFINO — Ceremonies this weekend will mark the closing of Christie Indian Residential School which since 1970 has served the educational needs of Indian children from Barkley Sound to Cape Scott.

Bishop Remi de Roo of Victoria will travel to the west coast to take part in the festivities.

The old school, located on Meares Island in Clayoquot Sound, about four miles from Tofino, this year had an enrolment of about 150 students.

Next fall, in accordance with the Indian Affairs Department policy of integration, they'll start attending public schools in Tofino.

DREAM SCHOOL

An Indian residential school on the west coast was the dream of Father A. J. Brabant who established a mission at Hesquiat in 1875. But lack of funds and interest prevented the dream from becoming a reality for many years.

In 1898 Alexander Christie, newly-appointed bishop of Vancouver Island, learned about the project and authorized sending a ship loaded with lumber and two carpenters to Kakawis on Meares Island, the school site.

Bishop Christie soon after was transferred to Portland where he urged Benedictine sisters and brothers to staff the fledgling school.

In May of 1900 four sisters and three brothers travelled from Portland to Kakawis, with a stopover in Victoria.

When they finally arrived at the new school there were no pupils in sight. The priests had to canvass the coast on the steamer Willopa to find children willing to leave home to attend the school.

By the time enrolment had increased to 60 the school was taxed to capacity. Brabant travelled to Europe and managed to raise enough money to finance construction of an additional wing and buy musical instruments for a school band.

The nuns taught girls how to do domestic tasks. Boys learned how to build boats, overhaul engines, maintain school buildings and grow food in the school gardens.

The head of the school Father Harry O'Connor will become director of the new hostel, said Bishop de Roo. Two nuns will continue to teach in Tofino public schools.

Mail Rate Up

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Airmail letters from the United States to most parts of the world outside the Caribbean, Latin America and Canada, will be 21 cents a half ounce after July 1, the U.S. postal service announced. Airmail rates to Canada and Mexico were increased last month, in line with domestic U.S. charges, to 11 cents and eight cents respectively.

Beach Park Project

UCLUELET — Terrance Beach Park here will be developed by seven university students and four high school students as a result of an $11,050 grant from the Opportunities for Youth Program.

The work will involve clearing trails for public access to the beach, and developing a picnic area with tables, benches and barbecues.

The high school students will also work on the Ucluelet recreation hall sports grounds.

All the workers will be housed in the basement of The Holy Family Church.

'MORE SEPARATISTS IN ENGLISH CANADA'

West Drives Lewis to Despair

LEWIS
. . . B.C. arrogant

New Democratic Party national leader David Lewis feels there are more separatists in English Canada, especially in the west, than in Quebec.

Guest speaker at a Kiwanis Club luncheon Tuesday at the Empress, Lewis lashed out at "arrogant assumptions" made by people in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba about the French fact in Canada.

Almost every time he travels west, he says he feels deep despair about chances for Canadian unity.

LITTLE EFFORT

"People here make very little effort to understand the legitimate aspirations and feelings of French Canadians," he said. "They feel this is an English country and French speaking citizens should adjust to that fact."

The NDP leader told about 100 club members the country will not exist many more years unless these English Canadians recognize biculturalism.

If they don't, he feels the separatist party will strengthen in Quebec. This factor, in combination with the economist and political thrust of the United States, would soon result in the end of Canadian nationhood.

"I often hear people in B.C. say 'let them go' (Quebec), and there ought to be a far greater generosity in our hearts," he said.

The NDP leader spoke out against the inundation of English Canadian culture by the U.S. media and added that the French language acts as a barrier against the bombardment in a manner valuable for the preservation of a distinct Canadianism.

"This country is the richer because the French Canadian wants to reserve his rights and culture," said Lewis.

The federal member from York-South in Ontario also referred to the threat of multinational corporations on Canadian independence.

Citing provincial statistics, he said these corporations shipped out $11.6 million of copper in 1969 and $128.8 million in 1970, but not a penny was plowed back into B.C. coffers.

U.S. ELEPHANT

"These resources, many of them non-renewable, are shipped raw out of the ground to the U.S., Japan and other places," he said. "After goods are manufactured from them, they're shipped back here and sold."

As well as the threat to Canadian economic independence, Lewis outlined the political dangers of jumping every time the "elephant sneezes" in the U.S.

With reference to J. Blair Seaborn, the Canadian diplomat reported to have carried out a secret Hanoi mission for the U.S., he was highly critical.

"I don't like the idea of our representative being used as a U.S. message-boy. I feel humiliated by that role, especially since prime minister Pearson didn't agree with the bombing of North Vietnam."

Seaborn's mission to Hanoi apparently was to issue a warning that U.S. patience was growing thin with North Vietnam following the Gulf of Tonkin incident.

Lewis said "we want along with the U.S." because of economic dependence on them.

TORY BIDS TO RETURN PELLETIER TO OTTAWA

Youth Program Critics Hammer Away

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier was in Victoria Tuesday for the constitutional conference. But his name and the $24.7 million opportunities - for - youth program kept popping up just the same in the Commons.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin started the Commons day by trying to move a motion ordering the minister to be in his seat today when the Conservatives will be accusing him of mismanagement of the summer youth program.

He was refused the necessary unanimous consent to put the motion.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, taking part in the main debate based on a Social Credit motion criticizing the government for "having neglected to institute the just society as promised," charged that political patronage is rampant in the youth program.

Liberal Keith Penner (Thunder Bay) joined the chorus when he complained about "some weird and wonderful spending program" inaugurated by the government.

"A communique from the secretary of state's office informs me that under the opportunities-for-youth program $1,220 will be given to a project called Spaghetti Banquet—$1,220 to assist the production of an animated film, a light-hearted three-minute look at spaghetti."

Another $23,500 project was to "demystify the dance," noted Mr. Penner.

The Social Credit motion said the government should have increased the basic income tax exemption, done away with the 11 per cent tax on building materials and instituted a guaranteed income for all Canadians.

Under House rules, there was no formal vote on the motion.

Mr. Caouette promised to name names to back up his charges of political patronage within the youth program during the budget debate next week.

Revenue Minister Herb Gray said that with the budget speech due Friday, it was difficult for cabinet ministers to answer arguments dealing with fiscal policies.

The tradition of secrecy surrounding a budget forced ministers "to refrain from saying anything that might be taken as a derogation of this principle of confidentiality."

Conservative finance critic Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) said the just society promised by the Liberals in the 1968 general election meant different things to everyone so it was an impossible promise to keep.

He also wondered how the Social Credit program of guaranteed incomes and retirement at 60 years of age would be financed.

That led Mr. Caouette to say M. Lambert "was the biggest noodle ever to sit on the treasury benches." It was little wonder that the former Conservative veterans affairs minister didn't understand the Social Credit financial policy.

OTHER IDEALS DISTANT

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said not only the just society was a distant ideal. The speech from the throne opening the present session of Parliament also had said "a society which is not inspired by love and compassion is not worthy of the name."

"I am afraid that that is what we have under the present government, a society which is not inspired by love and compassion."

Today's society was run by technocrats unconcerned with the sufferings endured by a great many Canadians, said Mr. Knowles.

Adien Lambert (SC—Berlechasse) calling for a reduction in the work week. In that way, more Canadians would have jobs.

Jack Marshall (PC—Humber St. George's-St. Barbe) and Andre Fotrin (SC—Lotbiniere) argued that a guaranteed income was the right of all Canadians.

But Gaston Isabelle, parliamentary secretary to Health Minister John Munro, said a guaranteed income would create major problems and reduce the incentive to work.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said MPs are complaining about their $26,000-a-year incomes. But she knew a widow trying to get by on $161 a month.

Clydebank to Stay In Business—Heath

LONDON (CP) — The Scottish shipyards that build Britain's luxury liners will stay in operation despite financial difficulties, Prime Minister Edward Heath said today.

The government will rebuild the financial structure of the Upper Clyde Shipbuilders consortium and the yards will keep working, Heath told 400 workers massed behind police outside his residence. The workers chanted and jeered, "Heath out."

Heath gave the assurances to a six-man delegation—led by Mayor Robert Fleming of Clydebank where the livelihood of 27,500 families is threatened by the industrial crisis—after hundreds of workers descended on London by special train from Glasgow to make their demands.

The prime minister, however, gave no guarantees that all the shipyard workers would get jobs in the reconstructed operation, with better management and labor relations, he said, the Glasgow shipbuilding operation could be successful.

The workers marched off to make more protests at the government's Scottish office and the House of Commons.

Upper Clyde went into partial liquidation Monday after the government refused to give it $14.4 million in needed funds.

Everything But Money

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi says he will help the Welfare Mothers Housecleaning Association in any way possible, but that doesn't include financial assistance.

Four of the mothers met Gaglardi Monday following a request for a $15,500 grant to be shared between the provincial and federal governments under terms of the Canada Assistance Act.

"He said as far as finances are concerned he couldn't help," said Norma Sprague, "but he said he would help us in any way possible."

If a grant was approved it would cover transportation, office and advertising expenses as well as the salary of a social worker for the group.

Mrs. Sprague said there are plenty of housework jobs available and the group which now has about 42 members is growing by about two a week.

The Victoria Low Income Group has a similar housework service which it calls Maid-a-Day.

She docks right at Victoria's door. And Seattle's.

Tow-Away Produces 'Ghost Town'

A tow-away no-parking zone has made a "ghost town" of the commercial area on the 600 block of Fort, Victoria council's traffic committee was told Tuesday.

Leading a petition of merchants in the area, W. E. Webb of the House of Webb restaurant said the police efforts to tow away cars from the area between 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. have caused more congestion than ordinary drivers would.

Traffic committee showed little inclination to change the zone, however, after traffic engineer Dave Campbell told them further parking would "avoid the street altogether."

"We want to keep a safe, smooth, convenient flow of traffic," Campbell said.

'FREE-FLOWING'

The merchants who came before committee were not satisfied with Campbell's explanation, however, and said they wanted to be present while a new survey is taken.

One merchant said: "I am absolutely serious — we might as well shut down at four o'clock."

The main cause of the traffic volume along Fort, he said, is provincial government employees returning home from work.

"I don't see why we have to cater to ghe government boys — they get free parking all day. Then they go right through to Saanich. They don't pay any taxes to the city."

Campbell was instructed to produce more figures to justify the tow-away zone, but council received and filed the petition.

Pool Date Now Set For Oct. 21

Completion of the city swimming pool at Central Park, originally set for Dec. 1, 1970, now has been set at Oct. 21, with official opening Nov. 25.

Main causes of the nine-month delay, Ald. Percy Frampton said Monday, was the three-month construction lookout last year and discovery of more bedrock than anticipated.

Contractor H. E. Fowler and Sons couldn't be held responsible, Frampton said.

He was asked why the month's delay between completion and official opening.

"We may be able to open earlier, but the staff has to get familiar with the pool and their jobs," he said.

OVERHEAD DOMES

Frampton said the new pool will be the only one in Canada with overhead domes.

Three circular acrylic domes will provide natural lighting for the pool. A smoke-colored tint will lessen glare.

Architect John di Castri who supervised the project said the main function of the new complex would be as a recreation centre rather than a swimming pool.

It will include an eight-lane, 50-metre Olympic-standard swimming course plus an eight-lane 25-metre course in a T-shaped pool.

The diving well will be equipped with two one-metre boards, two three-metre boards and one five-metre diving platform.

There will also be a separate children's pool.

No 'Legal' Objectors

Capital Regional District's scheme to discharge sewage into Turgoose Point (Cordova Channel) met no "legal" objection before the June 12 deadline for registering objections, says a Pollution Control Board spokesman.

He said that the Pollution Control Act differentiates protesters from legal objectors. An objector is someone who has interests in land adjacent to water, which may be affected by the discharge of effluent into the water.

"Protesters are people who just write in their protests." He declined to specify how many protests the board had received.

He said that all the Pollution Control Board can do is work within the framework of the Act when it determines who is a legal objector.

Under the Act, objectors were allowed 30 days to file their complaints with the board.

The proposed discharge of effluent into the channel will result from a new sewer system planned within the next 18 months for Central Saanich. A referendum approving the system passed in the municipality April 24.

Claims Denied

RICHMOND (CP) — The federal Department of Transport Tuesday denied claims by residents of the Sea Island area of Richmond that it has offered less than the current value of a building lot it requires for an airport runway extension. Regional manager Doug McLeod said the department has offered $8,500 for the lot in question. Sea Island resident Barbara Konne said earlier this week the DOT had only offered $7,000.

Spraying Postponed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Scheduled spraying with the herbicide Tordon in the Gold Bridge-Bralorne area, about 100 miles north of Vancouver, has been postponed indefinitely, Norman Kent, Hydro regional manager, said. Bill Hartley, NDP MLA for Yale-Lillooet, had charged that snow runoff would carry the herbicide from the hydro right-of-way into the Bridge River system.

Tenders Called

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro has called for tenders for supply and installation of four 595,000-horsepower turbines and governors at the Mica Dam, 85 miles north of Revelstoke. The first two turbines are to be delivered in 1975 and ready for service in the summer of 1976.

Motion Defeated

REGINA (CP) — Members of the Anglican diocese of Qu'Appelle have decided not to support the church's national executive council in providing assistance to draft-age American immigrants and armed forces deserters.

At the 52nd synod of the diocese, a motion asking that support be given the ministry of the World Council of Churches for assistance to American immigrants and armed forces deserters was defeated by the delegates.

The motion was introduced by Rev. D. A. Guthrie of Regina St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral. Guthrie said such assistance would not interfere in a nother country's internal affairs and would not encourage people to evade the draft and that it was not a political issue.

Grit Suspended

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal House leader Gordon Johnston was handed a 1½-day suspension from the Manitoba legislature Tuesday night when he refused to withdraw remarks questioning the impartiality of a committee chairman. Johnston's suspension, on a motion from government house leader Sidney Green, was carried by a vote of 25-14.

Haircut Price Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — The price of a haircut in most city barber ships rose to $2.50 from $2.25 Tuesday.

"Now, it doesn't seem to matter as much whether a man's hair gets a little long or ragged."

He said many shops are having trouble staying in business.

Three-Stage Program Set To Fight Sea Pollution

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian authorities are working on a three-stage program to develop environmental law with teeth and curb the privileges of major shipping states on the high seas.

If it unfolds as planned in about two years, it will result in one or more international agreements imposing legal obligations on states to prevent marine pollution.

The mood here is summed up by one official who said: "There is little or no environmental law now and we're to start some."

The Canadian approach is to try to temper rights and privileges of shipping interests with duties and responsibilities.

It is hoped controls of the problem will flow from a series of international meetings in 1972 and 1973.

Authorities here hope the Stockholm conference will produce a declaration of principles aimed at protection of the total human environment.

A Canadian draft document tabled at a preparatory meeting two months ago tied protective measures to the need for an environment permitting the fullest individual rights.

Every state could take the measures necessary to preserve its environmental integrity and no state could use either its own or any other territory in such a way as to damage the environment.

Dismissal Probe Breaks for 2 Weeks

The University of Victoria advisory board investigating the dismissal of three professors will not meet again until two days before the professors' contracts expire.

Board chairman Colin McLaurin said at the Tuesday afternoon hearing that commitments by board members will cause a delay of the board's proceedings until June 25. The contracts of Toby Graff, Dr. William Goede and Dr. Tikam Jain expire June 30.

An immediate reason for the delay is that Dr. Bernard Riedel — who was appointed to the board Monday to replace University of B.C. dean of science Dr. Vladimir Okulich—had an appointment in Ottawa today.

The other member of the board is Vancouver lawyer A. B. Carrothers.

SPECIAL MEETING

It was learned that the university's board of governors had scheduled a special meeting June 28 to deal with any recommendation coming from the advisory board, assuming the board had finished its deliberations by that date.

However, since the advisory board does not meet again until June 28, it appears the contracts of the professors will expire.

The professors, the university faculty association and students are boycotting the hearings on the grounds they were set up unilaterally by the administration. The board of governors appointed the advisory board under section 53 of the Universities Act. Any recommendation arrived at by the advisory board is not binding on any parties.

In testimony Tuesday, English department head Dr. Roy Leslie read a letter he had sent to arts and science dean John Clinenhaga after his department committee had voted in favor of granting tenure to Goede. The recommendation was subsequently overturned by the dean and president Bruce Partridge.

RESERVATIONS

The letter contains several of the reservations expressed by the English department committee members about granting Goede tenure. However, the committee had voted in favor of tenure by a vote of five in favor, one against and three abstaining.

Leslie wrote in part: "Much of the disquiet felt by a number of (Goede's) colleagues at the university has arisen not only from antipathy toward his ideas on many matters but also from uncertainty about his real position on certain matters of vital concern, such as methods of teaching and examinations, the structure of university government and the relationship between faculty and students.

"I am sure that he has on occasion been less than tactful in expressing his views and not always consistent in the stands which he has taken. To this extent I believe that the disquiet felt by many has been justified, and Dr. Goede is to some extent to blame for the mistrust which he has inspired in some quarters.

"Nevertheless I believe he is a man of sincere and deeply-felt convictions. The fact that he holds office in the local civil liberties union appears to me to bear this out.

CARRIED AWAY

"It is my strong impression ... that he is aware that he has been carried away on occasion by these strong beliefs and that he will settle down to be a responsible and constructive member of the university.

"If Dr. Goede were nothing more than an honest, intense exponent of popular opinion there would be no compelling reason to grant him tenure.

"He is a devoted teacher, he has the power to command the attention of students and he has considerable potential as a scholar, as both his graduate record and the best parts of written scholarship reveal.

"To keep Dr. Goede involves, admittedly, a slight risk, but I believe it is a risk worth taking."

BENEFIT OF DOUBT

Leslie told the hearing that the faculty committee had decided to give Goede the benefit of the doubt because it knew there were several steps of decision-making to be passed before tenure was granted.

"If we'd been told we were electing Dr. Goede to tenure, the decision might have been different," Leslie said.

McKINNON

The Decline of the Strap

Strapping in local schools has sharply decreased in the last three years because of public debate over the pros and cons of corporal punishment, says Allan McKinnon, Greater Victoria school board chairman.

However, no school board in B.C. has the authority to abolish corporal punishment because to do so would be contrary to the Public Schools Act.

Three years ago John Porteous, then a trustee on the Greater Victoria board, attempted to get strapping outlawed in the district.

In the ensuing heated debate which lasted two months the issue was fairly well aired in the news media.

Trustee Peter Bunn, who at that time was the chairman, said he had the unpleasant task of declaring Porteous' motion out of order.

In the following school year incidents of strapping dropped 35 per cent, McKinnon said, and they are still on the decrease, although he doesn't know by how much.

Earlier this year newly-elected trustee Walter Donald introduced a motion calling for abolition. He was asked to rephrase his proposal for presentation to the annual meeting of the B.C. School Trustees' Association.

At a committee meeting Monday Donald brought in two alternative resolutions, one calling for a search for alternatives to corporal punishment, the other for the government to amend the act to make it illegal. The trustees will have to select one for the annual meeting.

"There are some children who appear to be incorrigible and who seem to accept corporal punishment as a language they understand," Donald said. "I still find it unacceptable."

Trustee Phillip Ney said data collected on the effects of corporal punishment indicates it is deferimental psychologically and isn't effective as a disciplinary tool.

"If it's inefficient, ineffective and dangerous, I think it should be unlawful," Ney said.

Bunn agreed publicity on the subject has contributed to the reduction in strapping. But he said it would be "politically unsound" for the government to make it illegal.

McKinnon suggested the trustees make a month-by-month check of strappings at schools throughout the district to find out just how frequently teachers resort to corporal punishment, and whether it's still decreasing.

Bunn said he intends to ask for figures over the last two years at the end of the current school year.

AND NOW A LIQUOR BAN FOR ADULTS?

Schools have always made a point of discouraging students from drinking liquor. Greater Victoria school board intends to extend the ban to adults.

Trustees Tuesday authorized the board's construction and maintenance department to draw up a new policy on liquor for the benefit of groups renting school facilities.

The policy, which will spell out the illegality of possession and consumption of liquor on school premises, will likely be approved by trustees at the regular meeting Monday.

"The feeling of some people is that with greater use of school facilities by public groups, they would like to be able to have alcoholic beverages perhaps at a higher rental rate."

Construction and maintenance superintendent S. H. Dietze said there have been several inquiries about liquor from organizations which wanted to rent school facilities. He said one school district in B.C. does allow drinking by adults at certain functions.

Trustee Harold Knight commented: "I think it would be a bad example to forbid it to the children then turn around and then allow the adults to do it."

Trustee Walter Donald was the only dissenter.

"If the PTA wanted to have a wine and cheese party I don't see anything wrong with that," he said.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters,
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

We doctors have been known to have fads in the use of certain drugs or treatments, and often our patients enthusiastically "jump on the band-wagon," and build up the fad. For perhaps a thousand years, the three treatments given by almost every doctor to almost every patient, were copious bleeding, emetics (to produce vomiting), and purges (to empty the bowel).

Today these treatments have been given up, but even in my father's childhood, as he told me, a doctor (in those days, a "barber-surgeon") was called in when my father had a fever, and all the doctor would do would be to cut open the vein in front of the elbow and allow a pint or quart of blood to run out. If this didn't help, the doctor was likely to bleed him again and again and again.

I remember reading about a prominent man who some hundred years ago had a severe tubercular infection of his lungs. When he had a big hemorrhage from his lungs that nearly killed him, the prominent doctor was called who immediately bled him repeatedly until the man died from loss of blood. It is hard to believe that a doctor with even a thimble-ful of brains could do such a stupid thing, but it was "the thing to do," so the doctor did not use his good sense about it.

This love of fads never changes; only the fads themselves change. Today doctors and patients can get so enthusiastic about the use of a certain drug that druggists have to spend much of each day dispensing it. And then, after a few years, people come to realize that the drug did not do the wonderful things it was supposed to do, and they give up using it.

Hydro Expropriation On Munn Continues

B.C. Hydro has obtained its third expropriation order against property owners on Munn Road.

The latest has been served on Malcolm McSorley, 2100 Munn, who owns land on a right-of-way for a power line that would run from Pike Lake substation to Sidney.

McSorley owns 37 acres and has rejected Hydro's offers for the 5½ acres it wants. His claim is that Hydro would not give adequate compensation for the five acres that would be isolated as a result of the right-of-way.

Hydro and McSorley can still negotiate but the next step could be the appointment of an evaluator by the provincial cabinet.

The Crown agency last year obtained cabinet-endorsed expropriation orders against Munn Road land-owners Pat Codyre, 1890 Munn, and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Borden, 2144 Ferndale, who have had five acres they own on Munn expropriated for the power line which will run from Pike Lake substation to Victoria.

Codyre still lives in his house, which now stands out on a newly-cleared landscape. Hydro has cut and burned all the trees on the four-acre property in spite of Codyre's claims that Hydro never offered him a fair price for the land which, he says, the agency will not need for 10 years.

The evaluator, appointed by the government after the expropriation order served against the Bordens, suggested a price they say they might have accepted.

But Hydro considered it too high and is taking the Borden case to B.C. Supreme Court.

Committee Bans Fair Kiosks

The Victoria Fair advertising kiosks will not be allowed on city property this year, council's public works committee decided Tuesday.

Committee also refused a request from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce asking that four Victorian Days booths be allowed to remain in place during the tourist season.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay and Clyde Savage said they thought the kiosks were inoffensive and they had been allowed in the past but the two votes of Ald. Harold Olafson and Ove Witt were enought to prevent permission being granted.

Olafson said council should not compromise its principle of trying to prevent commercial enterprises from taking place and being advertised on city property.

Firemen Back Town

Volunteer firemen in Sidney are solidly behind the town's attempts to make the fire department independent of joint administration with North Saanich.

A statement read at Sidney council Monday by Ald. Hugh Hollingworth emphasized that the men will recognize the fire warden's committee as the governing authority.

"We will not recognize the joint fire committee as of July 1, 1971," continued the statement which was signed by Chief Hugh Loney and all volunteers, with the exception of Ald. Hollingworth, himself a volunteer.

Even those firemen who live in North Saanich, but are on call in Sidney, signed the document, Ald. Hollingworth said.

The fire crew also requested the name of the department be changed from Sidney and North Sannich to Sidney fire department. This will avoid confusion for both Sidney and the newly-formed Deep Cove fire crew when alerted by the Telephone Answering Service.

Pakistan Fund at $500

Victorians have given more than $500 to help the Pakistani cholera refugees.

Mrs. W. W. McGill, local representative of the Save the Children Fund, opened the campaign last Friday.

Mrs. McGill also said a new resident of Victoria, Harbans Sing Bagh, owner of the Taj Majal restaurant, will hold a benefit dinner on Pakistan Refugee Day on Friday.

The dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and will cost $10. All money will go into the fund.

Dinner registrations must be made with Mrs. McGill at 3441 Mayfair Drive, by Thursday.

McGill and Orme Ltd. at 649 Fort is acting as a collection depot for the fund and is giving receipts. Donations may still be sent to the McGill home with cheques made out to the B.C. Save the Children Fund.

Stanfield Sniffs Decay

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — There is a strong "odor of decay" about the Trudeau government Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said here Tuesday after sniffing the political winds of change.

The government, he said, "has been smelling for some time."

It's a smell that foretells the end and a new beginning," he said. The new beginning, he claimed, would lead in the next federal election to a new Conservative government taking office.

Stanfield spoke to a large gathering of Progressive Conservative supporters in Ottawa. They sat down to a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner and were treated to the new approach the national leader has adopted in making speeches. He sprinkles his remarks with political wit and satire, laughing at his opponents and is establishing a reputation for delivering fun speeches that have sharp barbs.

The smell of decay now permeating the Liberal administration was a "smell that Mr. Trudeau would like to ignore," said Stanfield. "But in this case, unlike some others your best friends may well tell you. And when you start losing your old guard as well as your right-guard, you're really in trouble."

His reference to losing the old guard was obviously a reference to recent resignations from the cabinet of ministers including Paul Hellyer, Eric Kierans and George McIlraith.

Mud Flat To Stay

A "stinking mud flat" in the Inner Harbor will have to stay in place to help support the Causeway, Victoria council's public works committee decided Tuesday.

The subject came up when committee received a letter from R. H. Goodchild, 1389 Slater, who said Mayor Courtney Haddock should use his influence to have the mud flat removed.

"I wonder what sort of impression this fetid corner of our harbor makes on the hundreds of American tourists who daily walk past it," Goodchild said.

However, committee members said they could do nothing about the flat because it supports the granite footing of the Causeway, and besides, it only appears in May, when the tides reach their lowest levels.

Mediation Resumes

TORONTO (CP) — Mediation talks resumed today in an effort to prevent a possible strike or lockout involving 1,500 Star employees in six unions.

A strike or lockout is legally possible at 12:01 a.m. Thursday, but no date has been set for either.

Mediation began Monday under provincial conciliator Victor Scott, who spent almost 12 hours with the parties.

It was the first direct meeting since last Thursday when the Council of Toronto Newspaper Unions broke off negotiations after rejecting a company offer providing for wage increases ranging from $34 to $41 a week in a three-year contract.

Fishboat 'Buy-Back' Scheme Starts Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — The next stage in the federal fisheries department's scheme to reduce the size of the British Columbia commercial salmon fishing fleet by buying boats from their owners was due to get under way today.

Frank Buble, secretary-manager of the Fishing Vessel Owners' Association of B.C. said it is hoped that the fleet can be cut by at least 25 per cent to give those remaining "a bigger share of the pie."

With about 7,000 vessels in the fleet, representing an investment of some $100 million, "the present share of the pie for each is not very big," he said.

Under the scheme, announced by the fisheries department last year, operators of class "A" boats—the bulk of the fleet—are paying greatly increased licence fees to enable the government to buy vessels back.

Two fisheries department officials will begin appraising boats today for purchase, beginning at Steveston, said Mr. Buble.

'BUY-BACK' GROUP

A "buy-back" committee, chaired by fisheries department chief protection officer Maurice Houghton, comprises one representative each from the association, United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, Native Brotherhood, Prince Rupert Co-op, and the Fisheries Association, will assist in the appraisals.

Mr. Buble indicated that the scheme, slated to get under way in March, may lose effectiveness for not getting off the ground until now, when owners are preparing to go out fishing.

"If the plan had got started three months ago, I believe we would have had 300 vessels. We had 200 offers two or three weeks ago, but now it's fishing time and I'm afraid most of these owners ill go out."

The project will also be hurt by the fact that a number of seine boats have changed hands since March and the new owners will not be too interested in selling, he said.

Boats sold to the department cannot be replaced. The government will sell them off to recoup costs—but not for any further use in the Pacific coast fisheries.

Turner To Visit City Police

Justice Minister John Turner has expressed interest in the Victoria police department program which has law students working during the summer as probationary constables, Chief Jack Gregory said today.

Turner, in Victoria to attend the federal-provincial constitutional conference, has tentatively scheduled a visit to the city police station later today.

Gregory introduced the program last year and it is being continued this summer. The idea is to give law students street level experience with police operations and to improve communications between police and youth. All sides agree the plan has succeeded.

Last summer five law students, four men and one woman, worked with veteran city officers from May to September at the pay rate for probationer 1 constables.

This year four different students, including one woman, were chosen from 20 applicants, three of them women. They are receiving general training and doing mainly beat work.

Meatcutters Vote Strike

Meatcutters in Greater Victoria and Vancouver have voted 73 per cent in favor of strike action in a contract renewal dispute.

However, negotiations are expected to resume with representatives of Canada Safeway, Super Valu, Lodom Holdings, Overwaitea, Shop Easy, Food Fair and High-Low.

George Johnston of Vancouver, secretary-business manager of Local 212 of the Amalgamated Meatcutters Union, said the local's major objectives are a substantial wage increase and a reduction in hours of work.

Meatcutters, now earning $4.55 an hour, have been seeking an increase of $1.50 an hour in a one-year contracts.

On hours, where one hour a week is accumulated towards a day off, the local wants alternating five-day and four-day work weeks at the present eight hours a day.

Johnston said the local wants the reduction in days off rather than less hours a day because under the latter "it just crams more work into less time."

Quaker Raps Canadian Complicity

A visiting Quaker said Tuesday Canada and Britain are open to charges of complicity in the Vietnam war because economic ties cause the nations to "play along with Uncle Sam."

"You know where your dollars are," said Kenneth A. Kirkpatrick, director of peace education for the American Friends Service Committee in the Pacific Northwest.

Addressing a public meeting in Bank Street School, the Seattle critic of President Nixon's Indochina policy said the only salvation for society is a sensitizing to problems of race, poverty and the war.

Nixon talks of peace and is concerned with the public relations element, said Kirkpatrick, but he is actually widening the war as the guts of his policies are the opposite of what they seem.

With Vietnam "one continuing atrocity," he said the U.S. president has built an incredible apparatus of repression on the home front instead of dealing with the problems of race and poverty.

In 1969, Kirkpatrick spent two months in Paris covering the Vietnam talks. Last summer he spent a week each in North and South Vietnam and five weeks in Paris, London and Washington studying the problem.

Freedom Planned

NASSAU (Reuter) — The Bahamas government has announced that it will seek full independence from Britain after the next general election but killed rumors that one would be held soon. Opening a new session of the Bahamas Assembly, Gov. Lord Thurlow said the government of Prime Mininster Lynden Pindling would not call an election before its current five-year term ends in 1973.

PROTECT ANIMALS FROM PESTICIDE DANGERS

New Environment Branch to Back Wildlife Service

By JOHN MA
Times Ottawa Bilding

OTTAWA—T Canadian Wildlife Sece will have more clout in protecting a n i m a s from pesticide dange from now on, Enonment Minister Jack vis told reporters toda

"The wildlife sece is now among allies," h aid.

The service finally was transferred to tnew environment departt created Friday.

Davis conced that the wildlife sece may have had difficulties in the past because of is isolation, particularly whei losing arguments with the federal agriculture department which controls pesticide uses.

He said he was not aware of reporters' suggestions that biologists have been unhappy because pesticide curbs were considered only in relation to human life and not the dangers to wildlife.

NEW OUTLOOK

But if that was true, it will no longer continue under the new setup because the full weight of the environment department will be used to back u p wildlife service recommendations a g a i n s t dangerous pesticides, Davis said.

He admitted no minister could veto the agriculture department's decisions b e c a u s e i t administers the Pesticide Registration Act. But he added, any inter-departmental d i s p u t e undoubtedly would go before the full cabinet and that's where the wildlife service would be assured of being heard.

The minister also revealed he is searching for a method of charging environmental surveys to industries which benefit by them.

The current $13 million f e d e r a l research program spread over the next three years to obtain basic ecological information about the Mackenzie V a l l e y pipeline route is an example, he said.

"How can the taxpayer recover the $13 million?

"We'll just have to devise some way of charging for this because much of the information will be used by various pipeline promoters to make their case.

"We haven't yet thought through how to make these basic research surveys self-liquidating, but we're working on it."

Davis said the National Energy Board will examine the "ecological viability" of all applications for building northern pipelines and since much of the information furnished by the companies will have to come from government research p r o j e c t s, there could be good sense in charging a fee for use of such information.

'HARD FACTS'

However, he said his department will circulate "hard factual knowledge" freely to public organizations in an effort to keep citizens abreast of pollution problems and solutions.

"There's a group in Victoria which calls itself Environment 100, for instance. It's main function is to provide f a c t u a l ecological material to citizens who inquire.

"One of the first jobs our department must do is to begin making available to groups like that good, hard information," said Davis.

"I'm not suggesting that we edit it or shape it to our ends in any way. But there's a conference going on now on the t e c h n i c a l aspects of measuring pollutants, for instance.

"One of our jobs must be to get that kind of information to such groups as Environment 100 so that it gets local distribution and is not lost to the general public because it came out at a convention in one city."

SPECULATIVE MONEY SHORT

Supply of mortgage funds for speculative builders in Victoria l a s t month was short, as it was few other parts of Canad

Most areas reporting to Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada — including Vancouver where conventional loans were plentiful, and the Okanagan, which has ample NHA funds — had adequate to plentiful s u p p l y of spec money.

Victoria area had plenty of mortgage mon for home-owners in May, whereas Vancouver noted a decline in NHA money.

The MICC bulletin reported May as a busy mortgage month across Canada, with brisk demand carrying over from April. Interest rates, stable in April, showed some upward movement in May in many communities, mostly about ¼ of 1 per cent.

This placed conventional lending rates at 9-9¼ per cent, in some cases up to 10¼ per cent, and NHA rates ranging between 8¾ per cent and 10 per cent, mostly below 9½ per cent.

Lending rates for commercial and industrial mortgages ranged upward from 9 per cent, depending on quality of security.

Money for rental projects was fair to plentiful for conventional loans in Victoria and Vancouver and 14 other centres. The balance of some 20 areas had little or no funds available for this purpose.

Most areas reported demand from home-owners and builders to be strong or steady, while real estate markets were g e n e r a l l y stable, along with prices in most parts of Canada.

Saanich Won't Ban Burning But Will Chat With Offenders

Pleas from several Saanich residents for restrictions or a ban on incinerator burning were rejected by public works committee Tuesday night in favor of a chat with the offenders.

Mrs. J. R. Levey, 2046 Casa Marcia, suggested restrictions in the summer because it is "usually impossible" to sit outdoors because of the smoke.

Mrs. Ivan Crull, 3977 Maria, asked for a ban because her neighbor always burns on weekends. She said the neighbor refuses to burn fewer fires and she was willing to pay more taxes for increased garbage collection to take refuse away.

As an alternative to a total ban, she suggested a ban on weekends.

Mrs. J. Dunbar, 2849 Heath, asked Saanich to "do something" and said with weekly garbage collection of two cans, one can could be used for garden wastes.

In all cases, the committee agreed to have officials find out the offenders and ask them to remedy the problem.

Another resident, Mrs. Patricia Davenport, 1941 Woodley, complained of her neighbor burning rubbish, rags, newspaper bundles and tires. She asked if there shouldn't be a limit on what can be burned in an incinerator.

TON OF PAPERS

The committee was told that the neighbor in this case has a ton of bundled newspapers which he was burning, but that arrangements had been made to dispose of them.

It was agreed that the fire chief and a member of the engineering department visit the property and if there is still a great quantity of material to make arrangements for disposal.

Ald. William Noel said he is not prepared to support a ban on all incinerators although he could understand Mrs. Davenport's problem.

"I've had a neighbor who's done something similar. We had a heart-to-heart talk and they remedied it," he said.

Ald. Alan Newberry said those who have complained have been inconvenienced, but the inconvenience of restrictions would affect far more people. There were bigger air polluters than backyard incinerators, he said, mentioning the mills on Gorge Road.

Ald. Leslie Passmore made the suggestion that the municipality write the neighbors of the complainers "asking them to be more considerate."

EROSION STUDY

In other business, the committee recommended that Thurber Consultants Ltd. conduct a feasibility study on what remedial action is needed, and the cost, of preventing erosion on part of Parker Avenue at Cordova Bay, provided the residents pay the cost.

Residents attending the meeting indicated willingness to pay for the cost of the study, which would lead to submission of a local improvement to pay for the work.

The committee was told that in 1968 an estimate was given of $417 per year for 20 years for a retainer wall for a 60-foot lot, but that costs have risen since them.

Suspension Lifted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prudence Wheeldon has been reinstated to the staff of Simon Fraser University after being suspended since October, 1969, for taking part in a strike of faculty members, it was announced Monday.

SFU president Dr. Kenneth Strand ended the suspension of Mrs. Wheeldon, an assistant professor in the department of political science, sociology and anthropology, following an action by the university's board of governors.

ACCELERATE FIGHT ON POLLUTION: MAYORS

SASKATOON (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities Tuesday passed six resolutions asking the federal and provincial governments to accelerate efforts in the fight against pollution.

One of the resolutions asked that municipalities be given the same treatment under the Excise Tax Act as provincial and federal government departments.

The resolution was a revision of a city of Windsor motion which asked that equipment and materials purchased by municipalities for air or water pollution control be exempt from federal sales tax. Some equipment used in sewage systems now is exempt but other materials, such as those used in incinerators, is not.

IMMEDIATE START

Another resolution asked for immediate action from the senior governments to pass immediately legislation to aid cities and towns in enforcing pollution control.

It also asked that water pollution be given priority by financially assisting municipalities to build and maintain sewage treatment facilities.

Calgary Mayor Rod Sykes said the resolution was asking for what already has been done.

"Everytime the provincial or federal governments want some publicity they pass more laws," he said. "We're just asking for more pollution of legislation."

He said there have been sewage assistance programs for some time. The programs weren't adequate but they were still available.

WILL HELP

Mayor William Dennison of Toronto said the resolution would help because although there are grants for sewage systems, no financial aid is available for dual sewage systems.

The single system, which backs up during rain storms and cuts the efficiency of sewage treatment, is one of the worst types of pollutions, he said.

Rev. R. S. Greene, a Calgary alderman, said most cities in the West have systems to handle rain and sewage separately. He said the east would get the lion's share of pollution control funds and westerners would be paying for something they already have.

Contaminated Fish?

RED DEER (CP) — The possibility of mercury contamination in fish in the Red Deer River has prompted the Alberta government to order an extensive fish sampling.

Results returned from a few samples of fish taken from the river in 1970 indicate a borderline problem, C. E. Stenton, senior management biologist with the provincial fish and wildlife branch, said Monday.

HOME GARDEN

Too Cool for Hot Plants

By HILDA BEASTALL

The vegetable gardener will notice that certain crops are making good growth, others appear to be no larger than a month ago. In the latter group are vegetables such as squash, tomatoes, sweet corn and beets.

Hilda

Looking over this list, the observant gardener will see that these are all warm weather crops. The fact is that none of them will do any growing in temperatures below 55 degrees F.

No wonder our poor semi-tropical vegetables want to shrink away. However, if we have covered the plants just before sunset with either cardboard or glass protectors, removing them after the air warms next morning, they will have made a little progress.

Do not give these plants fertilizer; your soil should be good enough to support them when once again the sun's warmth penetrates into the root area.

The cooler weather crops are doing fine, since our coastal climate is more to their liking. Concentrate on them.

Carrots, endive, peas, lettuce, green onions and the hardiest of the cabbage tribe will make a fine variety of fresh vegetables to add to daily meals.

You will be using early sowings of lettuce, green onions, thinning of carrots, and probably a picking of peas. Gardens which have been spared the near 30 degrees F. night temperatures during the past four weeks, have been pulling radishes too.

To compensate for possible late cropping or even the discarding in some cases, of the more tender vegetables, it will be a smart plan to sow more of the hardier kinds of vegetables.

A little thinning as the plants grow is not so wasteful, since many seedlings are usable.

Endive can be sown too as a different flavor appeal in salads, and while you remember it, sow kale seed outdoors at once so you will have a dozen seedlings to transplant by mid July. These plants will grow into your chief winter green supply.

Kale is one of the tastiest and most healthful of winter foods, and is so hardy that even though covered in snow, the young leaves will taste like the most delicious summer broccoli or young cabbage.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

When bridge was in its infancy some four decades ago, the player who trumped his partner's ace was either laughed at or derided, for his squandering of a trump was considered to be a sign of incompetence. His "folly" usually became the talk of the town, and he was shunned by the better players.

Undoubtedly, in some cases, the trumping of partner's ace was due to ignorance — that is, the "trumper" didn't know it was his partner's ace. But there were times — even in those days — when the trumping of partner's ace was done by design, because it was the right play from the defenders' viewpoint. Here is one of these deals.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

WEST

EAST

SOUTH
♠ 10 4
♡ A K Q J 10 7 5
◇ K 7 2
♣ 6

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ♠	Pass	4 ♡
5 ♣	Dbl.	Pass	5 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

After West had opened the club ace, East took a lengthy time-out to analyze the situation. It was quite apparent to him that South, for his leap to four hearts and his subsequent bid of five hearts, had a solid heart suit. It was equally apparent to East, as he gazed at the dummy that West had no strength whatsoever in spades.

The question was then: what did West have for his opening bid of one club, and his bid of five clubs? Since the club king was in evidence, surely West possessed at least seven clubs, and very probably eight, headed by the A-Q-J. Since West was known to have no high cards in either spades or hearts, he just had to have a high card in diamonds — and if it weren't the ace, then south's contract figured to be unbeatable.

Even if West possessed only seven clubs — which would mean that South had two clubs — and East trumped the second club lead, the setting trick would have to come from West's (presumed) diamond ace. But if West had eight clubs, then two diamond tricks were needed if the contract were to be defeated.

Thus reasoning, East trumped West's ace of clubs opening lead. He then shifted to the diamond queen, and the defenders cashed two diamond tricks.

Had East not ruffed West's ace of clubs, declarer would have fulfilled his contract. Actually, he would have made an overtrick if West did not cash the diamond ace at trick two, for South's diamonds would subsequently have been discarded on dummy's high spades.

Don was there already when Judy came in. "What happened?" he asked. "I started right away after your call. Didn't you?"

Judy smiled. "Sure, and I averaged just 42 miles an hour all the way. You speeded."

"A bit, but I did have three miles more to do than you," replied Don. "So I averaged 56 miles an hour, and got here twenty minutes before you did."

How far did he drive?

It said the find was made at the Chukotka gold mine in the Far East.

N.Z. Shuns Links With China

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — A definitive statement of the New Zealand attitude on the China issue shows that New Zealand is still a long way from accepting the Canadian solution.

The New Zealand government is known to have consulted Canada extensively on its approach to and negotiations with the Peking regime.

But a statement by Prime Minister Sir Keith Holyoake shows that the government is not willing to make the concessions which Canada made to establish diplomatic relations with mainland China. New Zealand rests its main hopes on some sort of a compromise being hammered out in the United Nations.

Setting out the considerations which have influenced the New Zealand government in forming its policy, Sir Keith said "the thing that matters most, to us and to other countries, is the peace of the Pacific."

SUPPORT FOR TAIWAN

It is important from this point of view that the countries of the area come to terms with Peking.

"It is even more important, especially for New Zealand, that a small country should not be abandoned in the face of the demands of a great power.

"This is why the government is resolved to maintain our existing ties with Taiwan and to uphold its right to its accepted place in the international community.

"Peking's rigid insistence on its own terms means that there is at present little prospect of our being able to establish relations with it as we should like to.

"We do not believe, however, that Peking need remain locked in its present position. The advantages of greater reasonableness and flexibility are immense.

"If it is willing to reduce its demands or to place the Taiwan issue on one side, the prospect of a variety of fruitful relationships would open up.

UP TO PEKING

"New Zealand would be one of many countries which would respond readily to any such show of reasonableness. So it is up to China.

"We shall continue to watch closely for signs of change in its attitude; we shall seek to establish contact; we shall enter into direct talks with the Chinese if and when they are willing to do so.

"In the meantime, it is to the United Nations we must look for some movement toward solving the problem. . . .

"New Zealand has voted against the Albanian resolution and we shall continue to do so, not because it calls for the seating of the Communists, but because it requires the expulsion of the Nationalists.

"We believe that the United Nations exists for the benefit of the weak rather than the strong. . . .

BOTH CAN HAVE SEATS

"The United Nations can make provision for the representation of both Peking and Taipei, and I believe it should do so.

"If Taiwan were thus assured of continued membership in the organization, it would be reasonable that Peking, as a great power, should take over the permanent seat in the Security Council allocated in the Charter to the Republic of China. . . .

"This is essentially a New Zealand view, based on a New Zealand assessment of what is possible, what is reasonable, and what is right."

The prime minister's statement has been commended by several newspapers. The New Zealand Herald says editorially that he has grasped several nettles, including the prickly question of the Chinese seat in the Security Council.

"In addition, he has drawn attention to some of the very practical realities," the paper adds. "It is all very fine to proclaim what should be done, but the lines of reasoning seldom take account of the attitudes and lines of thinking of the Chinese themselves."

Some circles, however, maintain that the prime minister's stand is too rigid in view of the rapid transition in world opinion. A New Zealand correspondent in Washington has predicted that when the full United States policy is revealed it may prove to be more flexible than that outlined by Sir Keith.

PRINCIPAL'S DEMOTION OPPOSED

Parents Threaten School Boycott

SIOUX NARROWS, Ont. (CP) — Parents have signed a petition threatening to withdraw their children from school unless the Kenora District separate school board reverses a recent decision to replace a separate school's principal.

Both Indian and white parents have expressed opposition to the demotion of 36-year-old Daniel Bouvier, who they say is responsible for the success of the integrated school.

Patrick Clarkin, 65, retiring as superintendent of education for the federal department of Indian affairs, has been hired as principal of Father Moss school by the Kenora board.

Many of the parents say there are good inter-race relationships in this community and contend that the separate school board trustees from Kenora, located about 30 miles northeast, are trying to "ram through" the change.

The board was "riding roughshod" over the expressed objection of the community.

"We are not about to be dictated to and put down by people who do not understand the relationship in our integrated school," white parents said in a recent brief to the board.

"The only reason we are trying to keep Dan Bouvier is because he is doing a good job," said Chief Andy White, 26, a father of four pre-school children.

CONSIDER BOYCOTT

Mr. Clarkin is to take over Sept. 1, the school board said. Most of the students are Indian, but there are about 30 white children.

"We did it for the betterment of the children."

Mr. Bouvier was appointed four years ago by the Sioux Narrows separate school board before it was taken over by Kenora. Area residents have been unhappy with the board amalgamation since, they say, it turns over control of local affairs to a non-resident body.

Sioux Narrows is about 150 miles east of Winnipeg.

Arabs Sentenced

RAMLE, Israel (Reuter) — Two young Arabs were sent to prison for life by a military court for being members of the Fatah guerrilla organization and for carrying out attacks which resulted in a number of deaths and injuries in the Jerusalem area during 1970.

'Invisible Ceiling' Over Women Workers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government and Crown corporations are "the worst offenders" in the area of inequality for working women, a member of the Liberal party's task force on the Status of Women report said Tuesday.

Jan Steele, and executive vice-president of the Ontario Liberal party, told about 50 persons at the Vancouver YMCA that Air Canada and Canadian National Railways were among organizations where women generally are in "supportive" positions with men in those of authority.

The federal civil service has an "invisible ceiling" beyond which women are not promoted, she said.

Thirty briefs were presented by various organizations. Priorities were day care, family planning, abortion and guaranteed annual income.

A member of the women's Liberation Alliance read a statement saying the task force is just a way of putting off implementation of the royal commission report.

The statement said the subject had been "thoroughly and competently covered by the royal commission and. . . the government should commit itself to action on the report."

ON THE WORLD DIPLOMATIC SCENE

How to Win Friends and Influence . . .

By STEPHEN SCOTT

TEL AVIV (CP) — There are few countries practising the fine art of winning friends and influencing people as well as Israel.

This country of three million, so small that one can drive between its extremes in only seven hours, must have friends if it is to exist in the midst of a hostile Arab world.

So it woos friends assiduously and does everything in its power to keep them. As its greatest friend is the United States, it exerts its greatest efforts in that direction. But it ignores no chance to cement friendship anywhere in the anti-Communist world.

To a correspondent who spent two frustrating weeks in Egypt attempting to get through the squeaky press machine of the military government to officials who could provide information, the Israel press relations service was news on a roller skate.

Egyptian officials frequently complain that their country gets an unfair press in the West. But when a Western reporter arrives in Cairo intent on doing a balanced story, he meets inefficiency, stalling, non-co-operation and endless politeness that has no meaning because the correspondent doesn't know whether requests or interviews are in the works or not.

GETS CLEAR ANSWERS

In Israel a visiting correspondent gets clear-cut answers to requests. Informed officials, either in the civil or military areas, are made immediately available. Guides are provided where necessary.

Correspondents in Egypt are subject to sometimes-puzzling censorship. There is censorship in Israel too, but it is not frequently applied and generally is understandable.

The Israeli government frequently brings at its own expense news people from various countries. Visiting parliamentarians get red-carpet treatment.

Outside the country Israel has an efficient press-officer corps at the various capitals. Foreign Minister Abba Eban speaks around the world. Premier Golda Meir, complete with a motherly look and a Wisconsin accent, appears on American television on occasion with blunt talk and highly quotable remarks.

Israel wants to get its point of view across in the continuing Middle East dispute. But there is more.

The country needs money and counts on large amounts in the form of loans and gifts from Americans. It has a foreign debt and a balance-of-payments deficit that are high for such a small country and must have foreign capital inflows to cope with them.

CARRY WORD HOME

For tourists who flock to Israel each year, the country itself is an advertisement. Everywhere one looks there are signs of prosperity. People in the street look young and vigorous. There is evidence of spectacular growth.

But every day the tourist reads in the local press about the danger of the Arabs restarting the war. It is a message they take back home.

But since last February, when Egypt said it was willing to sign a peace agreement with Israel in exchange for commitment of withdrawal of Israeli troops from land captured in the 1967 Middle East war, Egypt has made great strides in winning friends in the West.

Israel, in not responding in a positive way to the Egyptian offer, was at a public relations disadvantage and may still be today, although some feel that it is starting to get its views across again.

BANNERS LAUD BOMB STAND

Members of the Amchitka 2 group in Victoria were waiting with a 16-foot banner for constitutional conference political leaders to emerge from the Legislative Building at noon today.

They were met with the words, "We support the Canadian government in its protest against nuclear blasts on Amchitka Island."

Ontario Won't Probe Plant Closings

By LILLIAN NEWBERRY

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Gordon Carton has firmly rejected demands that the Ontario government investigate plant shutdowns and layoffs to see whether they are economically necessary and whether the plants could be kept open.

"Mass layoffs are almost invariably associated with unprofitable operations," he told a legislative committee studying his $25.8 million department estimates Tuesday.

Under new provincial legislation, 20 companies have given notice of layoffs of 50 or more employees since January, and the labor department is interested in four others that have not given notice.

More than 2,000 workers are affected, many of them in the permanent shut-down of six plants.

The minister said corporate decisions to lay off workers or close down are taken after a careful assessment by the businessmen.

DISLIKES CHOICES

To keep an unprofitable operation going and preserve jobs, he said, government would need to take over the company or subsidize it—"both of which are highly unattractive."

The role of government was to reduce the burden of adjustment on employees by helping them retrain and re-locate and by easing the heavy costs they face.

Mr. Carton gave the committee the first breakdown on job terminations since changes in the Employment Standards Act this year required advance notice when more than 50 workers are laid off for 13 weeks or more.

Seven have given unofficial notice and there are another 30 involved in lay-offs or shutdowns to which the new regulations do not apply.

Mr. Carton said 651 workers are being laid off by Canadian firms, 1,592 by United States subsidiaries and another 165 by a West German subsidiary.

Deputy Minister Tom Eberlee said later six companies have given notice of a total shutdown of a plant.

Welfare Work Plan Attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — A counterattack against proposals that people on relief be required to work for their welfare was launched Tuesday by the Canadian Council on Social Development.

Reuben Baetz, executive director of the council, said in a statement "it is disheartening that so many Canadians, without thinking, trot out this cruel and shoddy concept, in a panic, whenever this country suffers an unemployment crisis."

Baetz said work-for-relief programs would be more costly than current welfare programs, and in the past appear to have distorted normal public works financing.

At the same time, the concept leaves unanswered the question of which welfare recipients are in fact able to work.

Baetz's statement accompanied publication by the council of a study of 440 unemployed men receiving welfare assistance in Edmonton, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

The study concludes that even the most progressive of welfare programs "is unlikely to achieve any lasting benefits in the absence of nationwide policies of high employment and, if need be, the creation of new job opportunities that go beyond the traditional labor market."

The study also welcomes reform of the unemployment insurance plan to extend covereage to all workers and reduce the requirements for benefits. It states that the need for unemployed men to request welfare assistance should be reduced as much as possible.

Man Flees Judge's Home

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police on special guard duty fired four shots Tuesday at a man approaching the suburban Outremont home of Mr. Justice Aphonse Barbeau.

Police said the man left a car containing four other men and fled on foot, apparently uninjured, when told to stop by police. His four companions sped away in the car.

Special police guards have been set up at the homes of judges and other persons involved in trials arising from Quebec's terrorist kidnapping crisis of last October.

SMALLWOOD LEAVES FOR OTTAWA TALKS

A member of the Newfoundland conference delegation said Smallwood, who had been making abbreviated appearances at sessions during the first two days of the conference, had meetings scheduled in the capital today.

It was understood he was discussing the Newfoundland shipbuilding industry with officials in Ottawa.

Partial Success Seen for Talks

By BRUCE YEMEN

The constitutional conference was heading toward a likely mid-afternoon closing today with the possibility of partial success in an amending formula for the constitution.

There was a reasonably good chance that all provinces would support adoption of the formula which would require the consent of seven of the 11 governments for constitutional changes.

But there was apparently no guarantee that all provinces would agree to submit the formula to their legislatures for ratification at the earliest possible opportunity.

Quebec May Seek Delay

Quebec may reserve the right to delay such necessary approval unti it is satisfied in the field of income security policy where it seeks primacy over federal powers.

The social policy question would almost certainly be discussed at another constitutional conference well before all legislatures would have a chance to approve the formula.

This scope for delay could give Quebec Premier Bourassa the leverage he needs to continue his fight for provincial control of social policy while partially satisfying the conference's hopes of being able to present a concrete example of progress to the public.

The formula was agreed to in a tentative way as "feasible" by all provinces at the February constitutional conference in Ottawa.

It would be the federal government a veto on constitutional changes along with any province having more than 25 per cent of the Canadian population — that is, Ontario and Quebec.

Also required would be the approval of at least two western provinces having at least half the western population, and of two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Davis Makes Pitch

Bourassa has maintained that simply approving a formula by which to change the constitution isn't enough. The conference has agreed with him in the past in the sense that it would like to approve a number of fundamental changes along with the formula.

Ontario Premier William Davis made a strong pitch Tuesday for Quebec' social policy demands to be deferred to the next conference when they could be considered in the context of the entire tax system and distribution of powers.

However, there appeared to be a fundamental difference of opinion on the basic question of whether social programs should make income security payments directly available to people, perhaps through a form of guaranteed income or negative income tax, or whether the monies should be dispensed by way of provincial treasuries.

Davis proposed that Quebec's demands for control of income security programs be discussed at the next constitutional conference in the broad context of taxation and the distribution of powers.

There was no indication whether Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa would give up his insistence on tying his approval for a constitutional amending formula to his social policy demands.

But Davis' approach appeared to offer some possibility for Quebec to get support from its powerful neighbor province in its fight for more provincial control of income security programs.

Going 'Very Well'

The Ontario move came during a long afternoon session of the conference which ended only after the premiers and prime ministers had spent almost two hours together without their advisers.

There were indications the session was a "hot and heavy" one. It ended with Prime Minister Trudeau literally sprinting past and through a pack of reporters and Bourassa escaping by a side door.

Trudeau was quoted as saying the discussions went "very well — great."

An aide to Turdeau said there was "nothing to say" about the Ontario proposal and there was no indication that Ottawa favored putting the social policy question into the tax reform field.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's tax reform budget is scheduled to be unveiled in Ottawa Friday.

The social policy issued was expected to be discussed further today as the conference moved toward an end this afternoon.

Davis' proposal, made public during the session, expressed concern about the Quebec proposal to have income security policy "com-

Price Increases To Slow: Benson

OTTAWA (CP)—The economic outlook is optimistic generally for higher employment and slower price increases, though many uncertainties remain, the government said today in its pre-budget white paper.

The 237-page volume of statistics and reports on past and prospective economic affairs was tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. It is a preface to the budget speech he will deliver Friday, charting tax policy and producing a revised Income Tax Act.

The transition from an economic slump to a period of recovery "took effect during the second half of 1970," the white paper said.

By the end of the year, said the report on economic prospects for 1971, personal spending should pick up and business investment might be expected to contribute more to the expansion. The recovery started last year with higher government spending and strong export sales.

DEFICIT $418 MILLION

The white paper reported the government had a deficit of $418 million in its budgetary accounts for the fiscal year that ended last March 31, compared with a surplus of $393 million the previous year.

Such a shift from a surplus to a deficit in the federal government's balance between revenues and expenditures has a powerful pump-priming effect on a sluggish economy.

The $418 million deficit was added to the country's net debt, which on March 31 this year stood at a record $71,360.9 million. This amounted to $802.22 per person in Canada, up from $794.56 per capita a year earlier.

The federal government had $12,768 million in revenues last fiscal year, compared with $12,323.9 million in 1969-70. Expenditures in 1970-71 were $13,186.6 million, compared with $11,931.3 million in 1969-70.

Mr. Benson will give his forecast of revenues and expenditures for the 1971-72 fiscal year that began last April 1 when he delivers his new budget Friday.

PRIORITY PROBLEM

The economic review said unemployment has been "on a basically declining trend following the September, 1970 peak." But it still remains at a high level "and consequently continued to be, and is still, the prority problem of economic policy."

Price increases, the report added, showed a more moderate trend during the first three months of 1971 "apart from a rebound in food prices."

The rise in incomes has been outpacing improvements in productivity, "but to a somewhat lesser extent than a year ago."

People have more savings and are showing more willingness to spend on goods they could defer buying. Manufacturers have a backlog of unfilled orders, interest rates are lower, and credit is more easily available.

Taken together, these and other developments in the economy indicate "a significant growth in new employment opportunities and a likely downward trend in unemployment through the remainder of the year (1971)," the white paper said.

UNCERTAINTIES EXIST

"The rate at which prices are rising may well continue to be moderate, although many uncertainties exist about cost changes in relation to productivity, and about price developments among our trading partners."

Canadian exports boomed in 1970 while imports rose only slightly. Freeing the Canadian dollar from international exchange controls meant Canadian goods and services were cheaper for foreign buyers, while imports became more

Times Expose Halted

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The New York Times today in an editorial assailed U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell for "an unprecedented example of censorship" after Mitchell and the justice department he heads won a temporary injunction stopping publication of the secret Pentagon Vietnam war study.

But its lawyer, Professor Alexander Bickel, called the government's action a "classic case of censorship" forbidden by the first amendment's guarantee of a free press and free speech.

"A newspaper exists to publish; not to submit its publishing schedule to the U.S. government," he said.

The Times said it would "fight what we believe to be an unconstitutional prior restraint imposed by the attorney-general."

COURT ORDER

Under the court order issued Tuesday by Federal Judge Murray Gurfein, The Times is forbidden to publish any further material from the secret documents detailing U.S. involvement in Vietnam at least until the judge rules on the government's request for a permanent injunction.

Russians Ready to Make 'Concrete' Berlin Offer

BERLIN (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, said today that the Big Four talks on West Berlin have advanced to the "stage of examining concrete proposals on the content of a possible agreement."

Brezhnev told the East German Communist party congress in East Berlin that he can't speak for the United States, Britain and France, "but we, on our side, are prepared to make efforts to bring this matter to a successful completion and to ensure that the agreement reached be effective and carried into life."

Brezhnev gave no hint of concessions to the Western demands for an end to Communist harassment of West Berlin and of traffic between the city and West Germany.

But he called for ratification of the treaties West Germany concluded in the last year with the Soviet Union and Poland, saying this "will largely contribute to a renovation of the political climate in Europe."

Chancellor Willy Brandt has pledged not to submit the treaties for ratification until a satisfactory Berlin agreement is reached. West German officials reported last week that the Big Four ambassadors to Germany had reached general agreement on a liberalization of surface traffic between West Germany and West Berlin, but they said much remained to be done before an over-all agreement could be written.

Brezhnev voiced only token criticism of the United States, saying that the capitalist world was losing ground, and "in such a situation, some of the bosses of the imperialist world are becoming incapable of a sober appraisal of the situation and are undertaking military adventures, resorting to aggression."

"Evidence of that are the aggressive wars of the imperialists against the peoples of Indochina and the Arab countries."

More Communities Hit by Hydro Strike

Fewer men but more localities were involved in today's strikes by electrical workers against B.C. Hydro.

Other areas involved include Langley, Haney, North Vancouver, Sapperton, Hope, Lillooet, Seaton, Cache Creek, Kelly Lake, Burns Lake, Houston, Valemont, McBride and 100 Mile House.

Negotiating committees of Local 258, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and B.C. Hydro met Tuesday.

Local president Tom Forkin of Vancouver said later the meeting was a "general exploration" and that wages are "by no means the only thing in this picture."

Other major issues include job security because of contracting out of work and isolation pay.

"No other meetings have been arranged at this point," said Forkin, who reiterated the local's position in favor of an outside mediator or board to assist in settling the dispute.

Mexico Mayor Quits In Goon Squad Probe

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — The mayor and police chief of this city have resigned in the wake of charges that they sponsor the "Falcon" goon squads that shot and killed 11 student demonstrators last Thursday.

Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez, who denied involvement immediately after the clash, today would not answer questions as to why police did not intervene when the Falcons attacked the students.

Benson's Advice: Borrow More, Spend More

OTTAWA (CP) — The government expects consumer spending to be a big prod for economic growth in the balance of 1971.

Where will the money come from?

The budget papers tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Edgar Benson seem to hint that people should loosen their own purse strings—and perhaps borrow more in order to spend more.

The white paper's economic forecast noted that in the last two years, there has been an above-average rate of personal saving. Consumer debt relative to incomes has tapered off.

In other words, according to the white paper, more people have more money in the bank than they did. And they could borrow more against their higher incomes.

"Increased liquidity coupled with lower interest rates and greater availability of credit should generate substantial outlays for new homes, furnishings, appliances and automobiles," the report said.

It added that there have been signs already that people have been spending more on the kind of purchases they deferred during the period of high inflation and uncertainty about the future.

The government's figures show that in the first three months of 1971, personal income after taxes was running at an annual rate of $2,602 per capita, or $10,408 for a family of four. Personal expenditures were running at $2,358 per capita or $9,432 for a family of four.

Two years earlier, per capita after-tax income was $2,334 or $9,336 for a family of four, and personal expenditures amounted to $2,161 per capita or $8,644 for four.

The white paper said the use of consumer credit last year increased much less rapidly than in most recent years—by only five per cent, compared with 13 per cent in 1969 and 14 per cent in 1968.

Escaping Politicians For Real Clowns

By PETER McNELLY

I knew something wasn't on the level the moment we entered the Memorial Arena and met the circus official.

"You're the reporter who's going to be a clown, aren't you?" said the official. "Wait over there for a moment."

He whispered something to my wife, and she suddenly broke into that short, nervous laugh women make when they walk over an air vent in a fun house and their skirts get blown above their waists.

★

The official told me proceeds from the Shrine Circus went toward charities for crippled children and asked me to mention that in the newspaper. Then we entered room six, the clown's room.

"Sorry kid," Rex told me, "I told them we couldn't use moustaches."

Rex gave the once-over and decided the moustache could stay.

"You have to work with the face you've got. We'll make a character out of you."

He sat me down on a green steamer trunk, pulled about 10 jars of cream and powder out from somewhere and proceeded to remake my face.

"Stay loose, kid," he said, "and let me know if I'm hurting you with this make-up. And don't worry about it, it'll wash off in about a week."

Rex Young Transforms Reporter McNelly into a Lovable Buffoon

"You know," Lee said to Rex, "he looks like a young Emmett Kelly."

Lee asked what I'd been writing about lately, and I said I'd been covering the constitutional conference.

"Well," said Lee, "this isn't going to be much of a change, then. You should feel right at home with us clowns."

They Take Great Pride in Their Work And Are Quick to Praise Others

We did three numbers. The first was a fire routine. About five of us scrambled madly into the centre ring, squirting hoses in all directions, never quite finding the burning house.

A giant boom went off somewhere, and Rex rolled out of the house in a motorized bathtub, waving his arms, shouting and steering like a drunk hot-rodder.

Back in the dressing room, the midget Jimmy Armstrong took off his fireman's cap and winked at me. Then he sat near a locker and started to sing about a renowned lady of dubious character.

In the next stunt we were all in the army. No matter how hard Sgt. Rex tried to keep us in line, Jimmy, Mike Plunkett and the rest kept flopping around.

Then it hit, a great white disc of shaving cream, right in my face. That, I discovered later, was what had made my wife laugh.

"Sorry about that," said Rex later. "Your boss told us to do that."

"It's a good life," said Lee.

"Yeah," said Rex. "You know, like the sawdust in your veins, something like that."

Sawmill Destroyed As Workers Scramble From Sweeping Fire

Three men barely escaped as fire flashed through a sawmill near Point Ellice bridge this morning.

The mill was destroyed in a matter of moments with preliminary loss estimated at $50,000.

"We just had enough time to get the hell out of there," said co-manager Bob Bell.

Flames left only charred timber and the crumpled tin roof of the ancient mill owned by Dalziel Box Co. Ltd., at the corner of David and Turner Streets.

The other co-manager, Reg Hopkins, said he noticed flames and smoke coming from a room housing a diesel engine beneath the saw platform he and worker Bill Swift were working on.

Hopkins, who has seen at least three major fires in his 47 years with the company, gave up attempts to reach an extinguisher as flames licked up the saw belt beside him.

●

The fire broke out about 10 a.m. and swiftly engulfed the small mill which lies alongside the Point Ellice division of B.C. Forest Products. Some small piles of lumber adjacent to the burning building were also destroyed.

BCFP workmen, trained to fight fire, laid their own hoses alongside the burning mill and soaked down lumber piled there.

The entire on-duty force of 20 city firemen turned out in four trucks to fight the fire, in the heart of Victoria's fire-sensitive mill district. It was under control in less than an hour.

Saanich and Oak Bay fire departments went on a pre-arranged standby notice in case any other blazes broke out in the city.

Hopkins said it would be impossible to gauge the loss accurately until there was opportunity to study the state of machinery and foundations.

Cause of the outbreak has not been determined but deputy chief R. J. (Carl) Coates said a short circuit in the diesel room wiring was a possibility.

The company operated the only cedar mill in Victoria, producing airplane spruce and boat lumber. Over 2,500 feet of lumber was in storage around the mill.

A short time after the Dalziel fire was brought under control, city firemen were called to Herald and Douglas where roofing tar had caught fire.

Workmen were heating the tar but an open valve in the heating device had gone unnoticed and liquid tar had flowed to tar blocks stored nearby setting them ablaze.

UNIONS PLAN MEETING NEXT WEEK

Retirement Centre Site Stirring

The first steps were taken Tuesday towards a construction start on a multi-million-dollar luxury retirement centre in Oak Bay which may become a new focal point of the eight-month Sandringham Private Hospital strike.

Rezoning of the land, part of which touches Cranmore Road, was granted by Oak Bay council last December.

National Nursing Homes Ltd., which sought the rezoning, also manages Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, where 28 members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees have been on strike since Sept. 30 seeking a first contract. The hospital has continued running with replacements taking the strikers' places.

Oak Bay municipality is expected to issue a building permit shortly for the retirement centre, which is estimated to cost around $5 million.

A trailer identifying the contactor as Inter-Island Construction Ltd. has been moved on to the site and a shack is being built beside it.

John Schibli, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council, said Inter-Island has agreements with the carpenters and laborers unions but is a prime contractor so much of the work will be sub-contracted.

The fill was being moved to the site by trucks from Chew Excavating Ltd., which Schibli said is a union firm.

Asked if there will be action by the unions on the construction project, he reiterated past comments that he is sure that contractors bidding on the work "would be keeping their mind on the (Sandringham) feud and adjusting prices accordingly."

He added: "I would assume that there will be union firms on the project. However, that doesn't say that the building trades as such may not meet and consider what might happen inasmuch as the building trades council has been giving strong support to Sandringham strikers."

The building trades council will be meeting in one week "to discuss this," he said.

HELPED BY SCHOOL BOARD

Operation Recycle Gets Space

Operation Recycle received permission Tuesday from the Greater Victoria school board to use the basement of Braefoot elementary annex as a temporary depot for storing collected materials.

The non-profit organization, which has operated since February, recently received a grant of $20,070 under the federal Opportunities for Youth program. The grant will pay wages of 20 students during the summer.

Barbara Corry, who appeared before the board's construction and maintenance committee, said Operation Recycle needs a depot in which to store paper, glass and metal before shipping it up-island or to the Mainland, but can't afford to rent a warehouse.

"I expect we may eventually make money and even eventually rent our own warehouse," she said, but added that making a profit on the enterprise is not particularly important.

Greater Victoria residents can deliver certain kinds of wastes to about 40 sup-depots which are located at houses in the area. Location of these sub-depots can be obtained by phoning 477-1863.

Operation Recycle also has copies of a sheet of instructions on how to separate and recycle garbage.

Extensions Urged For Uvic Profs

The three University of Victoria faculty members whose contracts were not renewed should get one-month extensions pending the outcome of hearings into the affair, faculty president Charles Doyle said today.

See earlier story on Page 51.

Doyle said the board of governors should grant the extensions because the hearings, which opened Tuesday, are not scheduled to resume until June 28, two days before the contract expiry date.

●

"This will afford the board of governors the opportunity to be magnanimous and announce a one-month extension to these contracts," Doyle said.

The delay is good from another point-of-view, he said, because it will allow University of B.C. Dean Bernard Riedel, a member of the investigating panel who was appointed only this week, to familiarize himself with documentation related to the cases.

Ask the Times

Q. Is marijuana a narcotic? R. B.

A. Under the Narcotic Control Act marijuana is legally considered a narcotic. But the executive director of the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C. in Vancouver says this is pharmacologically inaccurate. He describes marijuana as a drug that should be dealt with under the Food and Drug Act. This is not possible under current legislation because the Food and Drug Act cannot be repetitive of the Narcotic Control Act.

Q. What does "HB" on my HB pencil stand for?—W.S.

A. HB stands for Hard Black. The HB is in the middle of the range that varies from the softest pencil used for artwork and the hardest pencil used for drafting. The degree of hardness of a lead is a measure of how much the lead resists abrasion by the fibres of the paper being marked on.

arthur mayse

WHILE THE HARD-nosed gentlemen from Ottawa and the provinces speak their minds in closed session, here is a much briefer utterance to chew on. It was made by the wife of a Quebec mayor who accompanied her husband on a group junket to Victoria several years ago.

This lady from the fair province looked out over the beautiful city where it took the sunset light. Then she murmured as much to herself as to those around her: "To think we might have lost all this!"

Those were words from the heart. They said much. I value them because they give substance to a feeling that has come on me in one or other of the separate Canadas, each unique, that combine to make the whole.

There is a town on the Nova Scotia south shore that we once arrived at by a road bordered with cornflower and yellow-eyed daisies. As age is reckoned in Canada, it is very old, and it lives on intimate terms with the Atlantic in all its moods.

A French navigator — De Monts, who sailed that way in 1604 — lost a sheep overside and named the dint in a rugged coastline Port Mouton. The name became Mutoon on the tongues of the South-of-Englanders who came later.

It is a town that lives at peace with its history in a Canada that I was only vaguely aware of before we went down to Nova Scotia. May the larger Canada never lose it!

In a land so enormous as this, it is always a temptation to settle for the narrow horizon and the insular attitude.

For that reason, I am glad that my luck has permitted me to live in, or at least visit, some of those other Canadas.

Not all of them, or even enough of them. Like most Canadians, I don't know my homeland anything like as well as a dweller in it should. But now and then, and here and there, I have felt the sense of heritage that overtook the mayor's wife whose horizons had been expanded.

It does me good, sitting here the widest part of a continent distant, to be aware of Montreal. Of all our cities, this is the most vital. It is supremely arrogant, temperamental and effervescent. It is tough, dangerous, good-humored, and possessed of a joy of life which is all its own.

More than anything else, Montreal is alive. It is not merely a great city — it is an experience I could wish for every Canadian at least once in a lifetime.

I have also felt that sense of heritage in the Canadas that lie beyond the towns and cities.

In northern Ontario, for instance, when autumn is on the land and the woods are ablaze for mile on endless-seeming mile with such reds and yellows as this soft island climate can never kindle.

Or on the prairies: and I think that anyone who has lived in that Canada can never completely accept enclosed and obstructed country.

Having lived there, even though long ago, I can understand why Manitobans or Saskatchewaners transplanted to the far west sometimes find adjustment hard to make. They feel "closed-in" — they miss the wide sky and the sweep of vision that is blocked only by the curve of the earth.

My own Canada is quite otherwise, and I can never be away from it for long before homesickness sets in. Yet like the others it is part of the whole, made so by the processes of a Confederation that was completed only in 1949 when Newfoundland became a province.

We might have lost all this. We could still lose it. Make no mistake about it, the withdrawal of one partner or block of partners from Confederation would be the beginning of the end.

It's a sobering possibility. As a Canadian, I hope this present conference will steer us farther away from it.

More Jobs Predicted In Economic Outlook

LET RAHMAN RULE—SHARP

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp suggested today that the government of East Pakistan should be turned over to its elected leader, now being held prisoner by the central Pakistani government.

Sharp, answering questions in the Commons on the Pakistan crisis, did not mention Sheik Mujibar Rahman, head of the Bengali-based Awami League, by name.

But the minister said Canada would prefer a political solution in Pakistan that would see "those individuals elected given the responsibility of governing Pakistan, and particularly East Pakistan."

Partial Success Seen for Talks

By BRUCE YEMEN

The constitutional conference was heading toward a likely mid-afternoon closing today with the possibility of partial success in an amending formula for the constitution.

There was a reasonably good chance that all provinces would support adoption of the formula which would require the consent of seven of the 11 governments for constitutional changes.

But there was apparently no guarantee that all provinces would agree to submit the formula to their legislatures for ratification at the earliest possible opportunity.

Quebec May Seek Delay

Quebec may reserve the right to delay such necessary approval until it is satisfied in the field of income security policy where it seeks primacy over federal powers.

The social policy question would almost certainly be discussed at another constitutional conference well before all legislatures would have a chance to approve the formula.

This scope for delay could give Quebec Premier Bourassa the leverage he needs to continue his fight for provincial control of social policy while partially satisfying the conference's hopes of being able to present a concrete example of progress to the public.

The formula was agreed to in a tentative way as "feasible" by all provinces at the February constitutional conference in Ottawa.

It would give the federal government a veto on constitutional changes along with any province having more than 25 per cent of the Canadian population — that is, Ontario and Quebec.

Also required would be the approval of at least two western provinces having at least half the western population, and of two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Davis Makes Pitch

Bourassa has maintained that simply approving a formula by which to change the constitution isn't enough. The conference has agreed with him in the past in the sense that it would like to approve a number of fundamental changes along with the formula.

Ontario Premier William Davis made a strong pitch Tuesday for Quebecs social policy demands to be deferred to the next conference when they could be considered in the context of the entire tax system and distribution of powers.

However, there appeared to be a fundamental difference of opinion on the basic question of whether social programs should make income security payments directly available to people, perhaps through a form of guaranteed income or negative income tax, or whether the monies should be dispensed by way of provincial treasuries.

There was no indication whether Bourassa would give up his insistence on tying his approval for a constitutional amending formula to his social policy demands.

But Davis' approach appeared to offer some possibility for Quebec to get support from its powerful neighbor province in its fight for more provincial control of income security programs.

Going 'Very Well'

The Ontario move came during a long afternoon session of the conference which ended only after the premiers and prime minister had spent almost two hours together without their advisers.

There were indications the session was a "hot and heavy" one. It ended with Prime Minister Trudeau literally sprinting past and through a pack of reporters and Bourassa escaping by a side door.

Trudeau was quoted as saying the discussions went "very well — great."

An aide to Turdeau said there was "nothing to say" about the Ontario proposal and there was no indication that Ottawa favored putting the social policy question into the tax reform field.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's tax reform budget is scheduled to be unveiled in Ottawa Friday.

The social policy issued was expected to be discussed further today as the conference moved toward an end this afternoon.

Davis' proposal, made public during the session, expressed concern about the Quebec proposal to have income security policy "com-

Price Increases To Slow: Benson

OTTAWA (CP)—The economic outlook is optimistic generally for higher employment and slower price increases, though many uncertainties remain, the government said today in its pre-budget white paper.

The 237-page volume of statistics and reports on past and prospective economic affairs was tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. It is a preface to the budget speech he will deliver Friday, charting tax policy and producing a revised Income Tax Act.

The transition from an economic slump to a period of recovery "took effect during the second half of 1970," the white paper said.

By the end of the year, said the report on economic prospects for 1971, personal spending should pick up and business investment might be expected to contribute more to the expansion. The recovery started last year with higher government spending and strong export sales.

DEFICIT $418 MILLION

The white paper reported the government had a deficit of $418 million in its budgetary accounts for the fiscal year that ended last March 31, compared with a surplus of $393 million the previous year.

Such a shift from a surplus to a deficit in the federal government's balance between revenues and expenditures has a powerful pump-priming effect on a sluggish economy.

The $418 million deficit was added to the country's net debt, which on March 31 this year stood at a record $71,360.9 million. This amounted to $802.22 per person in Canada, up from $794.56 per capita a year earlier.

The federal government had $12,769 million in revenues last fiscal year, compared with $12,323.9 million in 1969-70. Expenditures in 1970-71 were $13,186.6 million, compared with $11,931.3 million in 1969-70.

Mr. Benson will give his forecast of revenues and expenditures for the 1971-72 fiscal year that began last April 1 when he delivers his new budget Friday.

PRIORITY PROBLEM

The economic review said unemployment has been "on a basically declining trend following the September, 1970 peak." But it still remains at a high level "and consequently continued to be, and is still, the prority problem of economic policy."

Price increases, the report added, showed a more moderate trend during the first three months of 1971 "apart from a rebound in food prices."

The rise in incomes has been outpacing improvements in productivity, "but to a somewhat lesser extent than a year ago."

People have more savings and are showing more willingness to spend on goods they could defer buying. Manufacturers have a backlog of unfilled orders, interest rates are lower, and credit is more easily available.

Taken together, these and other developments in the economy indicate "a significant growth in new employment opportunities and a likely downward trend in unemployment through the remainder of the year (1971)," the white paper said.

UNCERTAINTIES EXIST

"The rate at which prices are rising may well continue to be moderate, although many uncertainties exist about cost changes in relation to productivity, and about price developments among our trading partners."

Canadian exports boomed in 1970 while imports rose only slightly. Freeing the Canadian dollar from international exchange controls meant Canadian goods and services were cheaper for foreign buyers, while imports became more

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The New York Times today in an editorial assailed U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell for "an unprecedented example of censorship" after Mitchell and the justice department he heads won a temporary injunction stopping publication of the secret Pentagon Vietnam war study.

But its lawyer, Professor Alexander Bickel, called the government's action a "classic case of censorship" forbidden by the first amendment's guarantee of a free press and free speech.

"A newspaper exists to publish; not to submit its publishing schedule to the U.S. government," he said.

The Times said it would "fight what we believe to be an unconstitutional prior restraint imposed by the attorney-general."

COURT ORDER

Under the court order issued Tuesday by Federal Judge Murray Gurfein, The Times is forbidden to publish any further material from the secret documents detailing U.S. involvement in Vietnam at least until the judge rules on the government's request for a permanent injunction.

Russians Ready to Make 'Concrete' Berlin Offer

BERLIN (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, said today that the Big Four talks on West Berlin have advanced to the "stage of examining concrete proposals on the content of a possible agreement."

Brezhnev told the East German Communist party congress in East Berlin that he can't speak for the United States, Britain and France, "but we, on our side, are prepared to make efforts to bring this matter to a successful completion and to ensure that the agreement reached be effective and carried into life."

Brezhnev gave no hint of concessions to the Western demands for an end to Communist harassment of West Berlin and of traffic between the city and West Germany.

But he called for ratification of the treaties West Germany concluded in the last year with the Soviet Union and Poland, saying this "will largely contribute to a renovation of the political climate in Europe."

Chancellor Willy Brandt has pledged not to submit the treaties for ratification until a satisfactory Berlin agreement is reached. West German officials reported last week that the Big Four ambassadors to Germany had reached general agreement on a liberalization of surface traffic between West Germany and West Berlin, but they said much remained to be done before an over-all agreement could be written.

Brezhnev voiced only token criticism of the United States, saying that the capitalist world was losing ground, and "in such a situation, some of the bosses of the imperialist world are becoming incapable of a sober appraisal of the situation and are undertaking military adventures, resorting to aggression."

"Evidence of that are the aggressive wars of the imperialists against the peoples of Indochina and the Arab countries."

More Communities Hit by Hydro Strike

Fewer men but more localities were involved in today's strikes by electrical workers against B.C. Hydro.

Less than 300 men were out at a wide range of communities, including Duncan, Ladysmith, Salt Spring Island and the Vancouver Island Terminal at Duncan.

Other areas involved include Langley, Haney, North Vancouver, Sapperton, Hope, Lillooet, Sexton, Cache Creek, Kelly Lake, Burns Lake, Houston, Valemont, McBride and 100 Mile House.

Negotiating committees of Local 258, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and B.C. Hydro met Tuesday.

Local president Tom Forkin of Vancouver said later the meeting was a "general exploration" and that wages are "by no means the only thing in this picture."

Other major issues include job security because of contracting out of work and isolation pay.

"No other meetings have been arranged at this point," said Forkin, who reiterated the local's position in favor of an outside mediator or board to assist in settling the dispute.

Mexico Mayor Quits In Goon Squad Probe

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — The mayor and police chief of this city have resigned in the wake of charges that they sponsor the "Falcon" goon squads that shot and killed 11 student demonstrators last Thursday.

Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez, who denied involvement immediately after the clash, today would not answer questions as to why police did not intervene when the Falcons attacked the students.

Benson's Advice: Borrow More, Spend More

OTTAWA (CP) — The government expects consumer spending to be a big prod for economic growth in the balance of 1971.

Where will the money come from?

The budget papers tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Edgar Benson seem to hint that people should loosen their own purse strings—and perhaps borrow more in order to spend more.

The white paper's economic forecast noted that in the last two years, there has been an above-average rate of personal saving. Consumer debt relative to incomes has tapered off.

In other words, according to the white paper, more people have more money in the bank than they did. And they could borrow more against their higher incomes.

"Increased liquidity coupled with lower interest rates and greater availability of credit should generate substantial outlays for new homes, furnishings, appliances and automobiles," the report said.

It added that there have been signs already that people have been spending more on the kind of purchases they deferred during the period of high inflation and uncertainty about the future.

The government's figures show that in the first three months of 1971, personal income after taxes was running at an annual rate of $2,692 per capita, or $10,408 for a family of four. Personal expenditures were running at $2,358 per capita or $9,432 for a family of four.

Two years earlier, per capita after-tax income was $2,334 or $9,336 for a family of four, and personal expenditures amounted to $2,161 per capita or $8,644 for four.

The white paper said the use of consumer credit last year increased much less rapidly than in most recent years—by only five per cent, compared with 13 per cent in 1969 and 14 per cent in 1968.

Hydro Expropriation On Munn Continues

B.C. Hydro has obtained its third expropriation order against property owners on Munn Road.

The latest has been served on Malcolm McSorley, 2100 Munn, who owns land on a right-of-way for a power line that would run from Pike Lake substation to Sidney.

McSorley owns 37 acres and has rejected Hydro's offers for the 5½ acres it wants. His claim is that Hydro would not give adequate compensation for the five acres that would be isolated as a result of the right-of-way.

Hydro and McSorley can still negotiate but the next step could be the appointment of an evaluator by the provincial cabinet.

The Crown agency last year obtained cabinet-endorsed expropriation orders against Munn Road land-owners Pat Codyre, 1890 Munn, and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Borden, 2144 Ferndale, who have had five acres they own on Munn expropriated for the power line which will run from Pike Lake substation to Victoria.

Codyre still lives in his house, which now stands out on a newly-cleared landscape. Hydro has cut and burned all the trees on the four-acre property in spite of Codyre's claims that Hydro never offered him a fair price for the land which, he says, the agency will not need for 10 years.

The evaluator, appointed by the government after the expropriation order served against the Bordens, suggested a price they say they might have accepted.

But Hydro considered it too high and is taking the Borden case to B.C. Supreme Court.

Committee Bans Fair Kiosks

The Victoria Fair advertising kiosks will not be allowed on city property this year, council's public works committee decided Tuesday.

Committee also refused a request from the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce asking that four Victorian Days booths be allowed to remain in place during the tourist season.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay and Clyde Savage said they thought the kiosks were inoffensive and they had been allowed in the past but the two votes of Ald. Harold Olafson and Ove Witt were enought to prevent permission being granted.

Olafson said council should not compromise its principle of trying to prevent commercial enterprises from taking place and being advertised on city property.

Firemen Back Town

Volunteer firemen in Sidney are solidly behind the town's attempts to make the fire department independent of joint administration with North Saanich.

A statement read at Sidney council Monday by Ald. Hugh Hollingworth emphasized that the men will recognize the fire warden's committee as the governing authority.

"We will not recognize the joint fire committee as of July 1, 1971," continued the statement which was signed by Chief Hugh Loney and all volunteers, with the exception of Ald. Hollingworth, himself a volunteer.

Even those firemen who live in North Saanich, but are on call in Sidney, signed the document, Ald. Hollingworth said.

The fire crew also requested the name of the department be changed from Sindey and North Sannich to Sidney fire department. This will avoid confusion for both Sidney and the newly-formed Deep Cove fire crew when alerted by the Telephone Answering Service.

Pakistan Fund at $500

Victorians have given more than $500 to help the Pakistani cholera refugees.

Mrs. W. W. McGill, local representative of the Save the Children Fund, opened the campaign last Friday.

Mrs. McGill also said a new resident of Victoria, Harbans Sing Bagh, owner of the Taj Majal restaurant, will hold a benefit dinner on Pakistan Refugee Day on Friday.

The dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and will cost $10. All money will go into the fund.

Dinner registrations must be made with Mrs. McGill at 3441 Mayfair Drive, by Thursday.

McGill and Orme Ltd. at 649 Fort is acting as a collection depot for the fund and is giving receipts. Donations may still be sent to the McGill home with cheques made out to the B.C. Save the Children Fund.

Mud Flat To Stay

A "stinking mud flat" in the Inner Harbor will have to stay in place to help support the Causeway, Victoria council's public works committee decided Tuesday.

The subject came up when committee received a letter from R. H. Goodchild, 1389 Slater, who said Mayor Courtney Haddock should use his influence to have the mud flat removed.

"I wonder what sort of impression this fetid corner of our harbor makes on the hundreds of American tourists who daily walk past it," Goodchild said.

Fishboat 'Buy-Back' Scheme Starts Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — The next stage in the federal fisheries department's scheme to reduce the size of the British Columbia commercial salmon fishing fleet by buying boats from their owners was due to get under way today.

Frank Buble, secretary-manager of the Fishing Vessel Owners' Association of B.C. said it is hoped that the fleet can be cut by at least 25 per cent to give those remaining "a bigger share of the pie."

With about 7,000 vessels in the fleet, representing an investment of some $100 million, "the present share of the pie for each is not very big," he said.

Under the scheme, announced by the fisheries department last year, operators of class "A" boats—the bulk of the fleet—are paying greatly increased licence fees to enable the government to buy vessels back.

Two fisheries department officials will begin appraising boats today for purchase, beginning at Steveston, said Mr. Buble.

'BUY-BACK' GROUP

A "buy-back" committee, chaired by fisheries department chief protection officer Maurice Houghton, comprises one representative each from the association, United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, Native Brotherhood, Prince Rupert Co-op, and the Fisheries Association, will assist in the appraisals.

Mr. Buble indicated that the scheme, slated to get under way in March, may lose effectiveness for not getting off the ground until now, when owners are preparing to go out fishing.

"If the plan had got started three months ago, I believe we would have had 300 vessels. We had 200 offers two or three weeks ago, but now it's fishing time and I'm afraid most of these owners will go out."

The project will also be hurt by the fact that a number of seine boats have changed hands since March and the new owners will not be too interested in selling, he said.

Boats sold to the department cannot be replaced. The government will sell them off to recoup costs—but not for any further use in the Pacific coast fisheries.

Turner To Visit City Police

Justice Minister John Turner has expressed interest in the Victoria police department program which has law students working during the summer as probationary constables, Chief Jack Gregory said today.

Turner, in Victoria to attend the federal-provincial constitutional conference, has tentatively scheduled a visit to the city police station later today.

Gregory introduced the program last year and it is being continued this summer. The idea is to give law students street level experience with police operations and to improve communications between police and youth. All sides agree the plan has succeeded.

Last summer five law students, four men and one woman, worked with veteran city officers from May to September at the pay rate for probationer 1 constables.

This year four different students, including one woman, were chosen from 20 applicants, three of them women. They are receiving general training and doing mainly beat work.

Meatcutters Vote Strike

Meatcutters in Greater Victoria and Vancouver have voted 73 per cent in favor of strike action in a contract renewal dispute.

However, negotiations are expected to resume with representatives of Canada Safeway, Super Valu, Lodom Holdings, Overwaitea, Shop Easy, Food Fair and High-Low.

George Johnston of Vancouver, secretary-business manager of Local 212 of the Amalgamated Meatcutters Union, said the local's major objectives are a substantial wage increase and a reduction in hours of work.

Meatcutters, now earning $4.55 an hour, have been seeking an increase of $1.50 an hour in a one-year contracts.

On hours, where one hour a week is accumulated towards a day off, the local wants alternating five-day and four-day work weeks at the present eight hours a day.

Johnston said the local wants the reduction in days off rather than less hours a day because under the latter "it just crams more work into less time."

Quaker Raps Canadian Complicity

A visiting Quaker said Tuesday Canada and Britain are open to charges of complicity in the Vietnam war because economic ties cause the nations to "play along with Uncle Sam."

"You know where your dollars are," said Kenneth A. Kirkpatrick, director of peace education for the American Friends Service Committee in the Pacific Northwest.

Addressing a public meeting in Bank Street School, the Seattle critic of President Nixon's Indochina policy said the only salvation for society is a sensitizing to problems of race, poverty and the war.

Nixon talks of peace and is concerned with the public relations element, said Kirkpatrick, but he is actually widening the war as the guts of his policies are the opposite of what they seem.

With Vietnam "one continuing atrocity," he said the U.S. president has built an incredible apparatus of repression on the home front instead of dealing with the problems of race and poverty.

In 1969, Kirkpatrick spent two months in Paris covering the Vietnam talks. Last summer he spent a week each in North and South Vietnam and five weeks in Paris, London and Washington studying the problem.

Partial Success Seen for Talks

By BRUCE YEMEN

The constitutional conference was heading toward a likely mid-afternoon closing today with the possibility of partial success in an amending formula for the constitution.

There was a reasonably good chance that all provinces would support adoption of the formula which would require the consent of seven of the 11 governments for constitutional changes.

But there was apparently no guarantee that all provinces would agree to submit the formula to their legislatures for ratification at the earliest possible opportunity.

Quebec May Seek Delay

Quebec may reserve the right to delay such necessary approval until it is satisfied in the field of income security policy where it seeks primacy over federal powers.

The social policy question would almost certainly be discussed at another constitutional conference well before all legislatures would have a chance to approve the formula.

This scope for delay could give Quebec Premier Bourassa the leverage he needs to continue his fight for provincial control of social policy while partially satisfying the conference's hopes of being able to present a concrete example of progress to the public.

The formula was agreed to in a tentative way as "feasible" by all provinces at the February constitutional conference in Ottawa.

It would give the federal government a veto on constitutional changes along with any province having more than 25 per cent of the Canadian population — that is, Ontario and Quebec.

Also required would be the approval of at least two western provinces having at least half the western population, and of two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Davis Makes Pitch

Bourassa has maintained that simply approving a formula by which to change the constitution isn't enough. The conference has agreed with him in the past in the sense that it would like to approve a number of funadmental changes along with the formula.

Ontario Premier William Davis made a strong pitch Tuesday for Quebecs social policy demands to be deferred to the next conference when they could be considered in the context of the entire tax system and distribution of powers.

However, there appeared to be a fundamental difference of opinion on the basic question of whether social programs should make income security payments directly available to people, perhaps through a form of guaranteed income or negative income tax, or whether the monies should be dispensed by way of provincial treasuries.

There was no indication whether Bourassa would give up his insistence on tying his approval for a constitutional amending formula to his social policy demands.

But Davis' approach appeared to offer some possibility for Quebec to get support from its powerful neighbor province in its fight for more provincial control of income security programs.

Going 'Very Well'

The Ontario move came during a long afternoon session of the conference which ended only after the premiers and prime minister had spent almost two hours together without their advisers.

There were indications the session was a "hot and heavy" one. It ended with Prime Minister Trudeau literally sprinting past and through a pack of reporters and Bourassa escaping by a side door.

Trudeau was quoted as saying the discussions went "very well — great."

An aide to Turdeau said there was "nothing to say" about the Ontario proposal and there was no indication that Ottawa favored putting the social policy question into the tax reform field.

Finance Minister Edgar Benson's tax reform budget is scheduled to be unveiled in Ottawa Friday.

The social policy issued was expected to be discussed further today as the conference moved toward an end this afternoon.

Davis' proposal, made public during the session, expressed concern about the Quebec proposal to have income security policy "com-

Benson Gives Pre-Budget View

OTTAWA (CP)—The economic outlook is optimistic generally for higher employment and slower price increases, though many uncertainties remain, the government said today in its pre-budget white paper.

The 237-page volume of statistics and reports on past and prospective economic affairs was tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Edgar Benson. It is a preface to the budget speech he will deliver Friday, charting tax policy and producing a revised Income Tax Act.

The transition from an economic slump to a period of recovery "took effect during the second half of 1970," the white paper said.

By the end of the year, said the report on economic prospects for 1971, personal spending should pick up and business investment might be expected to contribute more to the expansion. The recovery started last year with higher government spending and strong export sales.

DEFICIT $418 MILLION

The white paper reported the government had a deficit of $418 million in its budgetary accounts for the fiscal year that ended last March 31, compared with a surplus of $393 million the previous year.

Such a shift from a surplus to a deficit in the federal government's balance between revenues and expenditures has a powerful pump-priming effect on a sluggish economy.

The $418 million deficit was added to the country's net debt, which on March 31 this year stood at a record $71,360.9 million. This amounted to $802.22 per person in Canada, up from $794.56 per capita a year earlier.

The federal government had $12,769 million in revenues last fiscal year, compared with $12,323.9 million in 1969-70. Expenditures in 1970-71 were $13,186.6 million, compared with $11,931.3 million in 1969-70.

Mr. Benson will give his forecast of revenues and expenditures for the 1971-72 fiscal year that began last April 1 when he delivers his new budget Friday.

PRIORITY PROBLEM

The economic review said unemployment has been "on a basically declining trend following the September, 1970 peak." But it still remains at a high level "and consequently continued to be, and is still, the prority problem of economic policy."

Price increases, the report added, showed a more moderate trend during the first three months of 1971 "apart from a rebound in food prices."

The rise in incomes has been outpacing improvements in productivity, "but to a somewhat lesser extent than a year ago."

People have more savings and are showing more willingness to spend on goods they could defer buying. Manufacturers have a backlog of unfilled orders, interest rates are lower, and credit is more easily available.

Taken together, these and other developments in the economy indicate "a significant growth in new employment opportunities and a likely downward trend in unemployment through the remainder of the year (1971)," the white paper said.

UNCERTAINTIES EXIST

"The rate at which prices are rising may well continue to be moderate, although many uncertainties exist about cost changes in relation to productivity, and about price developments among our trading partners."

Canadian exports boomed in 1970 while imports rose only slightly. Freeing the Canadian dollar from international exchange controls meant Canadian goods and services were cheaper for foreign buyers, while imports became more

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The New York Times today in an editorial assailed U.S. Attorney-General John Mitchell for "an unprecedented example of censorship" after Mitchell and the justice department he heads won a temporary injunction stopping publication of the secret Pentagon Vietnam war study.

But its lawyer, Professor Alexander Bickel, called the government's action a "classic case of censorship" forbidden by the first amendment's guarantee of a free press and free speech.

"A newspaper exists to publish; not to submit its publishing schedule to the U.S. government," he said.

The Times said it would "fight what we believe to be an unconstitutional prior restraint imposed by the attorney-general."

COURT ORDER

Under the court order issued Tuesday by Federal Judge Murray Gurfein, The Times is forbidden to publish any further material from the secret documents detailing U.S. involvement in Vietnam at least until the judge rules on the government's request for a permanent injunction.

Russians Ready to Make 'Concrete' Berlin Offer

BERLIN (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, Soviet Communist party chief, said today that the Big Four talks on West Berlin have advanced to the "stage of examining concrete proposals on the content of a possible agreement."

Brezhnev told the East German Communist party congress in East Berlin that he can't speak for the United States, Britain and France, "but we, on our side, are prepared to make efforts to bring this matter to a successful completion and to ensure that the agreement reached be effective and carried into life."

Brezhnev gave no hint of concessions to the Western demands for an end to Communist harassment of West Berlin and of traffic between the city and West Germany.

But he called for ratification of the treaties West Germany concluded in the last year with the Soviet Union and Poland, saying this "will largely contribute to a renovation of the political climate in Europe."

Chancellor Willy Brandt has pledged not to submit the treaties for ratification until a satisfactory Berlin agreement is reached. West German officials reported last week that the Big Four ambassadors to Germany had reached general agreement on a liberalization of surface traffic between West Germany and West Berlin, but they said much remained to be done before an over-all agreement could be written.

Brezhnev voiced only token criticism of the United States, saying that the capitalist world was losing ground, and "in such a situation, some of the bosses of the imperialist world are becoming incapable of a sober appraisal of the situation and are undertaking military adventures, resorting to aggression."

"Evidence of that are the aggressive wars of the imperialists against the peoples of Indochina and the Arab countries."

More Communities Hit by Hydro Strike

Fewer men but more localities were involved in today's strikes by electrical workers against B.C. Hydro.

Less than 300 men were out at a wide range of communities, including Duncan, Ladysmith, Salt Spring Island and the Vancouver Island Terminal at Duncan.

Other areas involved include Langley, Haney, North Vancouver, Sapperton, Hope, Lillooet, Seaton, Cache Creek, Kelly Lake, Burns Lake, Houston, Valemont, McBride and 100 Mile House.

Negotiating committees of Local 258, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, and B.C. Hydro met Tuesday.

Local president Tom Forkin of Vancouver said later the meeting was a "general exploration" and that wages are "by no means the only thing in this picture."

Other major issues include job security because of contracting out of work and isolation pay.

"No other meetings have been arranged at this point," said Forkin, who reiterated the local's position in favor of an outside mediator or board to assist in settling the dispute.

Mexico Mayor Quits In Goon Squad Probe

Times News Services

MEXICO CITY — The mayor and police chief of this city have resigned in the wake of charges that they sponsor the "Falcon" goon squads that shot and killed 11 student demonstrators last Thursday.

Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez, who denied involvement immediately after the clash, today would not answer questions as to why police did not intervene when the Falcons attacked the students.

Benson's Advice: Borrow More, Spend More

OTTAWA (CP) — The government expects consumer spending to be a big prod for economic growth in the balance of 1971.

Where will the money come from?

The budget papers tabled in the Commons today by Finance Minister Edgar Benson seem to hint that people should loosen their own purse strings—and perhaps borrow more in order to spend more.

The white paper's economic forecast noted that in the last two years, there has been an above-average rate of personal saving. Consumer debt relative to incomes has tapered off.

In other words, according to the white paper, more people have more money in the bank than they did. And they could borrow more against their higher incomes.

"Increased liquidity coupled with lower interest rates and greater availability of credit should generate substantial outlays for new homes, furnishings, appliances and automobiles," the report said.

It added that there have been signs already that people have been spending more on the kind of purchases they deferred during the period of high inflation and uncertainty about the future.

The government's figures show that in the first three months of 1971, personal income after taxes was running at an annual rate of $2,602 per capita, or $10,408 for a family of four. Personal expenditures were running at $2,358 per capita or $9,432 for a family of four.

Two years earlier, per capita after-tax income was $2,334 or $9,336 for a family of four, and personal expenditures amounted to $2,161 per capita or $8,644 for four.

The white paper said the use of consumer credit last year increased much less rapidly than in most recent years—by only five per cent, compared with 13 per cent in 1969 and 14 per cent in 1968.
